Mr. Sinclair Has a Talk
He Sends a Wire
Mr. McAdoo Wonders
When a Woman President?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

Mr. Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for governor of California, called upon the President at Hyde Park, and the talk that followed, according to Mr. Sinclair's interview with reporters, was most interesting. The interview was extended, by the President's wish, from one hour, as originally arranged, to two hours.

Mr. Sinclair believes that he and the President are not far apart in their views. What the President thinks had not been reported at this writing.

There is understood to be at least one difference between the mental operations of Mr. Sinclair and the President. Upton Sinclair knows, and has always known, just how to rid the human race of all its troubles. The President, less positive, tells the public, frankly, that he is experimenting, and will change if he finds that he has made a mistake. Also, the President worries about this particular emergency, not seeking to change humanity and abolish its weaknesses all at one swoop.

Mr. Sinclair's statement that he, as governor, "will end starvation in California," surprised this writer, who had seen anxiety and lack of employment in California, as elsewhere, but no actual starvation.

A telegram from Mr. Sinclair begins, "For shame, for shame, Arthur Brisbane," and goes on to say that people in California really are starving.

"I have talked with thousands of them, gaunt, hungry men, who cried, 'Mr. Sinclair, the relief people will do nothing for us, and we don't know where we are going to get food for our families tomorrow.' What good to mention that eggs are twenty cents a dozen, when men can't get the twenty cents? And what did you ever know about me that would lead you to think that I would hide the truth, to o'ige the chambers of commerce?

"UPTON SINCLAIR."

It would be difficult to imagine Mr. Sinclair hiding the truth. Such conduct on the part of a professional truth-bearer has never been suggested here. It was suggested that Mr. Sinclair, advertising California as a land of starvation, is out of step with California chambers of commerce that advertise the rosy side.

Mr. Sinclair and the chambers are both good advertisers of their wares, and better teamwork would seem desirable.

Undoubtedly, in his long talk with the President, Mr. Sinclair told about the hungry men and the delinquent "relief people."

The President would want to know about that, and will attend to it, for he has said, "no man shall starve in this country."

There is plenty of money in the Treasury to feed all, and the President means to use it. Mr. Sinclair will have good news for those who appealed to him.

Senator McAdoo, of California, a Democrat, home from Europe, is not sure what he thinks of Upton Sinclair as Democratic candidate for governor, but thinks he may be an expensive governor if his plans go through.

CINDERELLA GIRL TO WED 'PRINCE'

Boston's "Cinderella Girl," Miss Editha Pierce Davis, 22, of Marshfield, has found her prince.

He is Charles J. Wallace, Jr., 27, son of Sergeant Charles J. Wallace of the Boston police traffic bureau.

Miss Davis, waiter's daughter who was adopted as a child by Mrs. Adelaide Pierce, multimillionaire Haddam King's' widow, today announced her engagement to young Wallace.

PARTY TONIGHT

She will join the Catholic church, it was stated, and probably will be married late this autumn. An engagement party is planned for tonight in the Hotel Westminster.

First meeting of Miss Davis and Wallace took place at a party given by the young woman in her South Shore home a year ago.

Young Wallace lives with his parents at 21 Cohden street, Roxbury, and in summer at 11 O street, Hull. He is employed as a circulation representative of a Boston paper on Cape Cod.

The "Cinderella Girl's" romance with the handsome and socially popular youth adds just one more colorful chapter to her already storybook-like career.

MOTHERLESS AT FIVE

Her father, unable properly to provide for her, consented to her adoption by a real-life fairy godmother, the then Mrs. Pierce of Lynnfield, widow of John Bartlett Pierce, co-founder and vice-president of the American Radiator Company.

Installed like a little princess in the palatial Pierce home, The Acres, near Lake Suntaug, the "Cinderella Girl" was brought up

BABY FALLS 4 STORIES, LIVES

Luck rode down four stories to the ground today with Arthur Robert Dobson, two and a half. In a plunge from a window of his home at 63 Brookledge street, Roxbury, he escaped serious injury.

While his mother, Mrs. Celia Dobson, busied herself with household tasks, the baby climbed to the living room window sill and fell.

Neighbors, who witnessed the plunge, shrieked, attracting attention of Mrs. Dobson, who raced downstairs, expecting to find her child dead.

Reaching the child before her, Dr. Benjamin Friedman of 19 Brookledge street, who also had witnessed the fall, rushed the child and the mother to Beth Israel Hospital in his car.

Here, to the doctors' amazement, no injuries, except bruises, could be found on the youngster.

An X-ray examination will be made, however, to be certain that no bones were broken or internal injuries suffered.

U. S., RUSSIA IN DEADLOCK

By International News Service

Washington, Sept. 6—Complete collapse of the debt negotiations between the United States and Soviet Russia was made known by Acting Secretary of State R. Walton Moore today.

He announced that an American move to revive the negotiations had failed owing to Moscow's adamant stand on excessive demands as the price for its willingness to meet American debt and damage claims.

Confessing the situation appeared hopeless, Moore said this government would make no further effort to continue discussions with Soviet Russia unless Moscow took the initiative.

In a formal statement he declared the United States had "gone the limit" in making concessions on the material questions involved, and that this government was convinced that "to go farther would be an unthinkable sacrifice of the public interests."

Doug as Don Juan Fails to Make Hit

London, Sept. 6 (US)—Douglas Fairbanks as "Don Juan" failed to make a hit with the British movie critics at its world premier, at which Lady Ashley, in whose divorce suit Doug is named as corespondent, failed to appear.

The new film, Doug's first effort off American soil, according to the Daily Express "pretends overmuch and achieves too little."

Two officers of the Spanish navy were taken aboard a navy submarine at the Boston Navy Yard, L. Y. Spear, vice-president of the boat company, admitted. S. B. Smith, company employe, escorted the officers, named Carranza and Garcia.

A naval permit allowed "S. B. Smith, Carranza and Garcia to visit the Navy Yard, Boston, Mass., and to inspect the submarine Bushnell."

R. I. TROOPERS ROUT 'FLYING SQUADRON'

By Associated Press

Fayetteville, N. C., Sept. 6—Fayetteville's police chief, the chief of detectives and the manager of the Faytex Mill, were held prisoners today by strike pickets who surrounded the Lakeview Mill, a Faytex branch, and shouted threats of violence against the officers if they came out.

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6—The general executive board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union today voted a strike in the cotton garment industry, which is expected to affect 50,000 workers immediately, and from 125,000 to 175,000 workers eventually. The strike was ordered to take effect October 1.

STRIKE NEWS OF U. S. IN BRIEF

Blood Flows in N.E.; Civil War Threatened

Mill after mill shut down today in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Maine as flying squadrons of pickets, precipitating new violence, spread the national textile strike through New England.

Blood was shed at Warren, R. I., when a flying squadron of 200 from Fall River, mobilized 2000 strikers and battled with police.

Strikers stoned a Sturbridge mill.

Their victory complete in southeastern Massachusetts, with all mills in Fall River and New Bedford closed, union leaders turned their efforts in the direction of Lowell, Biddeford, Me., and the Rhode Island front with 25,000 planning to join the flying squadron drive.

The squadrons forced the closing of three Warren, R. I., mills and at Lowell and in Maine several manufacturers, fearing their arrival

Dozens Shot in Strike Fights in South

Eight persons were killed, more than two score were wounded and twice that number were under arrest as staccato shotgun fire ushered in the fifth day of the textile strike with an ominous tattoo of death.

All of the killings occurred in the South — where steel-helmeted cavalry troopers, armed with automatics, were patrolling the mill fronts.

Coincident with news of the first pitched battle of the strike, came an estimate that 450,000 of the nation's 700,000 textile workers were idle today.

In the face of these developments, Francis J. Gorman, the U. T. W. A.'s strike leader, declared at Washington that the union would agree to arbitration only after every mill in the industry has been closed.

One of the deaths occurred at Augusta, Ga., one at Greenville, S. C., and at least six at Honea Patch, in the latter state, wher deputized

LABOR CONSCRIPTION THREATENED BY HITLER TO 250,000

REICH CHIEF REVIEWS ARMY OF SPADE STORM TROOPS

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
Copyright, 1934, International News Service

Nuremberg, Sept. 6 (INS)—Fifty thousand Nazi shock troops of labor presented arms to Reichs leader-Chancellor Hitler today and gave 200,000 Nazi spectators in the vast "Zeppelin Meadow" a thrill by their show of Germany's power.

Their arms were spades, their name "Voluntary Labor Service" but their drill was like one by West Point Cadets, and they goose-stepped in the best tradition of Germany's old army.

In a field 21 acres square, big enough to hold ten American football gridirons, bordered by a grandstand seating 200,000 and fringed by 100 huge hooked-cross flags, stood these 50,000 soldiers of labor.

SPADES SHINE BRIGHT

In their uniforms, the 50,000 looked like a somber lake of green until suddenly at one barked order they presented arms. With a single movement 50,000 polished spades came face up and mirroring in the sunshine turned the field into a blazing cauldron of light.

They stood in ranks of 1000 men each, shoulder to shoulder, facing Hitler's tribune with its silver Nazi eagle, 50 feet high. Each man bore a full marching kit with his spade.

Through the entrance sped Hitler's great black Mercedes automobile, behind it a bodyguard of eight Schutzstaffel men in black, all standing up in their automobile, scanning every spectator within reach of Der Fuehrer.

TRIBUTE TO WAR DEAD

Hitler took his place. Around him stood Goering, Goebbels, Frick. Fifty bugles blared. From the mass of troops, 10 battalions moved behind 100 flagbearers. Goose-stepping in perfect unison, they shook the ground, raised clouds of dust and brought a roar of spontaneous applause from the crowd.

Again the bugles sounded and a hundred flagbearers for five minutes swung their Swastika banners in rythmic movement. One long trumpet call brought the flags to the ground, while the music of massed bands played the Uhlan lament, "I Had a Comrade, for the Nazi dead.

Hitler rose. From 50,000 throats as from a college football crowd trained by a cheer leader came six short sentences:

"We want. One leader. One people. Nothing for us. Everything for Germany. Heil Hitler."

50,000 HAIL LEADER

Hitler spoke for 15 minutes. His words echoed through 50 loudspeakers, and when he finished a quarter of a million voices bellowed:

"Heil Hitler!"

For the next two hours Hitler, standing on Adolf Hitler Platz, took the march past of his labor troops for what was their day.

Tonight their 45 special trains will take them back to their labor camps and to work.

Hitler's words in his speech were chiefly a message of congratulation for the work of the labor corps.

But he said one thing that was interpreted as a prediction of general labor conscription in Germany. It was this:

HINT OF CONSCRIPTION

"The time will come when no German will be able to grow into the community of the people without first passing through your community.

"We are not Nazis because we possess power, but we want Germany to become Nazi because its sons are Nazis."

The Chancellor emphasized that the main object of the labor corps was to break down class barriers.

Constantin Hierl, in charge of the labor camp service, announced that 180,000 labor camp youths throughout Germany were standing at attention, listening to a broadcast of the Nurnberg exercises.

Bishops Accused of Breach of Neutrality

By International News Service

Geneva, Sept. 6—Charges that two German Catholic bishops had failed to observe neutrality in the Saar Valley were contained in a letter sent today to the League of Nations by the chairman of the Saar plebiscite commission.

The complaint was based on the actions of the Bishops of Treves in the Rhineland and Speyer in Bavaria, in connection with a meeting of Catholic youth held in the Saar July 29.

The Saar authorities gave permission for the meeting on condition it would be non-political.

But, the letter charged, the bishops sent a telegram to the late President Von Hindenburg assuring him their "unwavering fidelity to the supreme head of the German Reich."

Former Stage Star Shoots Self, Dying

Rockport, Sept. 6—Suffering from a bullet wound in her chest, which police say was self-inflicted, Mrs. Elizabeth Begen, 28, of Main street, was in a critical condition today at the Addison Gilbert Hospital in Gloucester.

Mrs. Begen, the former Miss Elizabeth Rankin, was once associated with the celebrated Eva LeGallienne in her plays.

Fr. Coughlin Says Treasury Keeps Old Deal for Banks

In teh Treasury Department of the federal government, the Old Deal is still in force, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, charged in a letter to Boston members of his Radio League of the Little Flower.

The leter, received today by league members, criticizes the "rubber stamp sycophants who prefer to follow the dictates of the 'Drain Trust' rather than the mandates of the voters."

It also reveals that Fr. Coughlin's winter series of Sunday afternoon broadcasts will go on the air first at 4 p. m., Boston time, on October 28.

TREASURY SCORED

In the Treasury Department, the Old Deal is in vogue, Fr. Coughlin asserts, because this department "has not seriously attempted to remedy our financial distress," and is burdening the people with nonproductvie debts and is printing more bonds for the good of the international bankers. He wrote:

"I have just taken a poll of the active Radio League members to find out their decision as to whether or not I should resume broadcasting next season.

"Here is the answer: I shall be on the airways at 4 p. m., E. S. T., on Sunday, the 28th day of October.

"Now, I cannot ask you to support this future broadcast unless I here disclose to you my brief but honest opinion on the basic questions to be discussed.

REGIMENTATION HIT

"First: While I believe in regulating both industry and agriculture, nevertheless, I am opposed to their regimentation as the sole means for restoring prosperity.

"Especially do I stand opposed to the policies of the Department of Agriculture which are wedded to the illusion that our nation can become prosperous by slaughtering pigs, burning wheat, plowing under cotton and laying waste God's bountiful gifts when so many of our fellowmen are hungry and naked. As I said last year, that was a Pagan Deal.

"Second: The breakdown of our economic system is directly related to money. Up to date the Treasury Department has not seriously attempted to remedy our financial distress. Here the Old Deal is still in vogue. It still persists in burdening us with non-productive debts, and continues to print more bonds for the good of the international bankers.

MAIN POINT GIVEN

"Now for the main point in this letter: Do you want me to preach 'Amen' both to the sins of omission and commission which have been perpetrated in the name of the New Deal, or do you expect me to teach what I consider to be the financial reforms which are necessary to save our democratic republic?

"Do you want me to oppose both reactionary politicians as well as the new type of rubber stamp sycophants who prefer to follow the dictates of the 'Drain Trust' rather than the mandates of the voters?

"Now you know my mind. Today, just as before March 4, 1932, I contend that mere promises cannot drive out the money changers. If the laborer, the farmer, the manufacturer and the over-taxed citizen hope for economic freedom and security, we must demand action.

"Therefore, I can honestly ask you for financial support because I wish to advocate this action and I expect only opposition from those who are draining away our rights and our wealth."

MAN JAILED IN FIGHT FOR GIRL

Charges, growing out of an early-morning scuffle in a Boylston street, Fenway apartment, occupied by a girl, brought three six-month sentences today, in Roxbury court, to Frank H. Smith, 29, also of Boylston street, a business executive.

Smith was found guilty of having a loaded .45-calibre German Luger pistol in his possession and of assault with a dangerous weapon on Gayland Turned and Charles Crockett, both of Oldtown, Me.

He appealed the sentences, imposed to run concurrently, and was held in $1,500 bonds.

Smith was arrested when police were called to the Boylston street apartment, in the early hours, to quel a disturbance. In the apartment of the girl, Miss Dorothy E. Hare, 23, the pistol was found, and Smith is declared to have admitted ownership.

According to police, Smith told them the fight started when the two men from Maine, accompanied by a girl, forced their way into Miss Hare's apartment and insisted that she leave Smith and go with them on a party.

Pair Face Court on Pool Charges

Henry Ruff, 43, of Thorndike street, Roxbury, and Joseph Thomas, 42 of Compton street, South End, faced South Boston District Court today charged with selling and collecting pool tickets. The pair were arrested yesterday on Dorchester street, South Boston, where it is alleged they were going to homes and stores making collections

YOUTH ON 'DATE' TAKEN AS THIEF

Starting blithely out on his birthday to keep a "date" with a young woman, Louis Scarpia, 24, of Chelsea street, East Boston, was arrested by police on Paris street and charged with four house breaks.

According to police, Scarpia confessed to four breaks, after $800 worth of jewelry allegedly was found at his home and in a hideout in Princeton street.

When arrested, Scarpia was discovered to be carrying a pair of gloves in his pocket. Police say he told them he carried them after he had carelessly left his fingerprints behind in his first break.

ITALY, FRANCE DENY PACT ON GERMANY

By International News Service

Rome, Sept 6—The Italian foreign office, through a high official spokesman, this afternoon denounced as "ridiculous" a story published in the United States to the effect France and Italy have concluded a pact to oppose German rearmament.

In the story, publication of which aroused some indignation here, the French delegation to the Levantine Fair at Bari, Italy, was credited as the source of the information.

The official Italian statement declared:

"The whole story is ridiculous. In the first place, the French delegation at Bari has no connections with such matters.

"In the second place, if any such agreement had been made, it would be announced through the official agencies of one country or the other."

France Also Brands Story as Untruthful

By International News Service

Paris, Sept. 6—The French foreign office this afternoon energetically denied the truth of a story published in the United States purporting to reveal completion of a Franco-Italian pact against German rearmament.

The foreign office did not feel the occasion warranted a written denial, but a spokesman said:

"There is not a particle of truth in it."

Boy, 13, Forces Rockefeller to Terms in 'Big Deal'

By International News Service

Kayenta, Navajo Reservation, Ariz., Sept. 6—The story of the latest Rockefeller transaction, in which a 13-year-old boy forced John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to accept his terms, was disclosed here today.

Irving Perry, youthful St. Louis hitch-hiker, concluded the dicker with the financier in the shade of the ranch house at Wetherill's trading post here, swapping a small bore rifle of dubious age for a ticket home.

The pair struck up an acquaintanceship while collecting bugs in the desert.

Young Perry, with his dog, "Rover," set out from St. Louis several weeks ago to visit relatives in Fredonia, Utah. He managed to hitch-hike to his destination, getting through the scorching, seldom-traveled San Juan Basin, Indian Country. But he didn't get along with his relatives, so started back.

The going was tougher on the return trip. He found himself stranded at Wetherill's trading post, with only his dog and a gun.

John Wetherill tried to dissuade the boy from continuing the trip. The boy was persistent, refusing what he saw as charity. He was forcibly detained.

While Irving was moping about the Wetherill post, a grey-haired man and his son came in, on tour, and heard about the boy at the big ranch dinner table. Irving and "Rover" became greatly interested in the new boy and helped him collect bugs in the desert moonlight.

On the return of the little party to the ranch house, Irving was surprised to learn his new-found friend had arranged to send him by car to Flagstaff, the nearest railroad point, and furnished him a ticket for home. He became stubborn again and would not consent unless the kindly gentleman would accept his rifle. After much deliberation this was agreed upon.

Irving didn't know his friends were John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his youngest son, David. In fact, when asked if he knew who Mr. Rockefeller was he said:

"I've never heard of him before, but I guess he must be in some good business."

Mother Sues

LASKY IS SUED FOR $1,000,000

Stage and screen circles today buzzed with speculation over the $1,000,000 suit filed in Manhattan supreme court against Jesse L. Lasky, pioneer movie maker, by Mrs. Nancy Whittington, mother of Marjorie "Legs" Whittington, former Ziegfeld Follies beauty.

No details of the grounds for the suit were revealed by papers filed with the clerk of the court.

A million dollars is a favorite sum in the Whittington family. That was the value put upon her "perfect" legs by Mrs. Whittington's daughter when Marjorie was being glorified in the Follies of the late Florence Ziegfeld.

Ziegfeld, himself, is said to have insured the beauty's shapely underpinning for $50,000.

Illiterates May Vote, Court Rules

New York, Sept. 6 (INS)—Illiteracy is no bar to a citizen's right to vote, according to a decision of Justice Aaron Steuer of the Supreme Court.

He denied an application of the Honest Ballot Association seeking to disenfranchise persons who could not read or write English, excepting those who were physically incapacitated.

'LITTLE EVA' CASE TO JURY TODAY

By Associated Press

Cooperstown, N. Y., Sept. 6—The fate of Mrs. Eva Coo, on trial for the slaying of Harry Wright, goes to a jury today.

Both the prosecution and defense were ready for their summations when court opened today and Justice Riley H. Heath told the jury he would give his charge before evening.

The blighted lift of Little Eva Coo rested in the tangled webs of her only defense. It is:

"I didn't kill Harry Wright. Martha Cliff, my betrayer, drove the car that crushed him in the lane of the haunted house. Oh, how can justice condemn me and forgive her sins?"

Big Jim Byard—he looks like Lionel Barrymore and is a lawyer of the old school, bluff, blustery and clever—ended his case abruptly. He flooded the record with a mass of conflicting evidence.

NABINGER ASSAILED

All along, he has tried to embroil debonair Harry Nabinger, Little Eva's kiss-tell-and-run lover, in the case crime. But even Nabinger's implication will not slacken the accusation against his client, a charge that she plotted and executed the murder of her shuffling handy-man for profit.

SOCIETY WOMAN FEARED DYING IN $18,500 JEWEL THEFT

Dying in Holdup

Brutally beaten and stripped of jewels valued at $18,500, Mrs. Raymond J. Anderton was reported seriously injured in her Newport, R. I., home today. The society woman was set upon Saturday night in the rear of her home as she returned from an automobile ride.

STRIP NEWPORT VICTIM OF GEMS ALSO BEATEN

Newport, R. I. Sept. 6 — The brutal beating of a wealthy Newport society woman by a robber who stripped her of jewels valued at $18,500, was revealed today.

The woman, Mrs. Raymond J. Anderton, was reported to be in a dying condition at her home on Catherine avenue, this morning.

It was reported that the robber lurked in the shadows of her garage and leaped upon her as she returned home from an auto ride Saturday night.

SCAFFA CALLED IN

Slugging her over the head and shoulders with a blunt instrument, the robber tore a diamond pendant from her neck and ripped an expensive ring from her finger.

According to her husband, Mrs. Anderton has lapsed into frequent comas since the attack. She is being attended by three physicians.

While Newport police denied working on the case, the Boston Evening American learned that Noel C. Scaffa, nationally known private detective, had been called in.

Scaffa said he believed the robbery was a local job.

$50,0000 PREVIOUS THEFT

Three years ago Mrs. Anderton was robbed of $50,000 worth of jewels while returning from Europe on the liner Ile de France.

Noel Scaffa was brought into the case at that time.

Mrs. Anderton was unable to account for the disappearance of her jewels, but absolved all employes of the French line from suspicion.

She said then that she had put the jewels in a bureau draw before retiring, and found them gone when returning to her stateroom from breakfast the next morning.

BENTZ DENIES DILLINGER TIP

By International News Service

Grand Haven, Mich., Sept. 6—Theodore Bentz, alias Craig, held here on a charge of armed bank robbery, today denied any connection with the slain gangster, John Dillinger, or that he had made any statement to federal officers here or in Portland, Me., where he was arrested, which could have led federal agents to the Dillinger hideout.

Bentz is alleged to have told federal agents that he was a member of the Dillinger gang and was with it when Dillinger shot his way out of a trap in northern Wisconsin several months ago.

Sheriff Ben Rosema has refused to turn Bentz over to federal authorities for prosecution on a murder charge in South Bend, Ind.

The prisoner was extradited here from Maine and has been identified by several witnesses as the machine gunner who wounded three citizens during a bank holdup here a year ago.

NEW U. S. LINK IN LABATT KIDNAP

By International News Service

Racebridge, Ont., Sept. 6—The hideout cottage in which John Labatt, wealthy London (Ont.) brewer, was held by kidnapers, has been found, and police have learned that it was rented by three Americans, who said they were from Flint, Mich.

The kidnapers' hideout, according to authorities here, was a cottage on the shores of Lake Muskoka, 13 miles from here.

London, Ont., Sept. 6—John S. Labatt, wealthy London brewer, who was held for three days by a kidnap ring, today hinted that a "break" in the case is momentarily expected. He said:

"I have been told by government officials that a new development might be expected soon, but I cannot talk about the case further. I am following the orders of the government."

LYNN OFFICERS HUNT MISSING U. S. LAWYER

Fearing that he may be suffering from amnesia or from a nervous breakdown, John G. Mills, Jr., of Raleigh, N. C., today asked Lynn police to search for Claude Kitchen, 32, of Washington, D. C., attorney in the Department of the Interior.

Kitchen, according to Mills, a friend, was last heard from in Lynn, when he wrote his wife and asked her to send money in care of Lynn general delivery. Mills came up to Lynn instead, but has been unable to find the missing attorney.

Police were told by Mills that Kitchen came north on a vacation trip in his automobile, carrying District of Columbia plates, but that the lawyer should have been back at work more than a week ago.

Bank Money Bag Find Baffles Law

The mystery of a Federal Reserve Bank money bag, found near the Hyde Park municipal golf course by three children, continued to baffle police today.

Neither the Boston Federal Reserve Bank or the Union Old National Bank of Lowell, robbed of $25,000 some time ago, were able to clear up the matter. Both said they had no record of such a bag being stolen.

NEW TRAFFIC RULES OUSTED IN LYNN

Mayor J. Fred Manning today instructed Lynn police to take no notice of the new regulations governing auto parking and other minor motor vehicle laws which go into effect on October 1st and to continue using the same tagging system.

Mayor Manning said that he would use the old system and place the drivers on their honor unless violations become flagrant. Under the new system, which was passed by the Legislature last spring, with no roll call or publicity, a three-way tag is used.

One tag is put on the car, summoning the driver to court within 24 hours, one is mailed to the owner by registered mail and the other is placed on file at the station house.

On the first summons the owner of the car, whether or not he was the person driving, is required to pay a $3 fine; second offense is $5, and the third $10.

The mayor stated:

"I do not wish my opinion construed as a defiance of any state law, rather it is an effort to prevent an injustice on the poeple of Lynn."

The mayor's decision was made after several conferences with the acting chief of police and the city solicitor.

PRINCESS XENIA IS HEIRESS TO GOLD HOARD

By International News Service

London, Sept. 6—Princess Xenia of Russia, a resident of New York, former wife of the millionaire playboy, William B. Leeds, will become an heir to one of the largest Russian treasures outside the Soviet union, according to a Belgrade dispatch published today in the Daily Mail.

The Jugo Slav Government, it is reported, has decided to turn over to her mother, the Grand Duchess Marie Gorgievna, 900 chests of priceless family treasures.

FILLED WITH GOLD

The chests, three of which are filled with rare gold coins, have been lying in the strong rooms of the Jugo Slav Finance Ministry, since they were taken out of Russia by General Wrangel when his invading White Russian army withdrew.

The treasure chests had been moved for safety from St. Petersburg to Moscow, during the first Russian revolution and thence to Feodosia on the Black sea.

There, Wrangel rescued them and they were taken to Kotor, Jugo Slavia. Wrangel sold part of the treasure, but the greater part of it has remained in the custody of the Jugo Slav government.

SOVIET DEMAND FAILS

Several times in the past five years the Soviet government has demanded that the treasure be returned to Moscow.

BYRD EXPERTS VIEW METEORS

Little America, Antarctica, Sept. 6—Dr. Thomas C. Poulter reported by radio from Bolling advance weather base that results of the simultaneous meteor and auroral observations taken with the cooperating station at Little America, have been extremely promising.

In this work, he said, Admiral Byrd, whose health is greatly improved, is assisting.

Poulter has set his reticle, a circular iron structure of his own invention for fixing by means of arbitrary co-ordinates meteor paths across the heavens, atop the shack, and he sits underneath it shouting his data down the trap door to Demas and Waite, who are acting as recorders.

Reticles at both stations are set at an angle that enables the observers to scan approximately the same small area of the heavens and it is hoped that when the data is collected and examined new determinations of the height of meteors as well as new radiants may be had.

NOEL COWARD IN YACHT WRECK

By Associated Press

Ile Rousse, Corsica, Sept. 6—Noel Coward, actor and playwright, was stranded on this Mediterranean island by the wrecking of the yacht Maiel, which he had chartered from Claude Graham-White for a cruise.

Coward was on shore when a sudden storm Saturday drove the little vessel against rocks. As the cabins flooded, members of the crew sprang into the swirling water and fought their way to shore.

All of Coward's clothing, his money and his papers were on the yacht. He walked along the coast for 20 miles, finally reaching this community. He persuaded a hotel proprietor to cable to his friends in London.

Coward's London associates sent him money and arranged to have him enter France without a passport. The playwright plans to leave here today for Nice, then go to Paris.

Coward recently recovered from a operation for appendicitis, and before his cruise was at work on a British production of "The Royal Family" by Edna Ferber and George Kaufman, scheduled to open in London, October 18, with Marie Tempest as star.

Shot to Death

Mrs. Dwight T. Danyew of Port Chester, N. Y., was shot to death because she married. She was killed by a spurned suitor, Charles McGuire, who then ended his own life. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

WOUNDS KILL BRIDE SLAYER

By Universal Service

Port Chester, N. Y., Sept. 6—Charles McGuire, infatuated mathematics instructor, died in the hospital here of bullet wounds in the legs and abdomen, as police were waiting to charge him with the murder of his former sweetheart and colleague, Mrs. Florence Leeming Danyew, pretty young high school teacher.

Mrs. Danyew, 29, was found shot to death, and Prof. McGuire severely wounded in a roadster near the girl's home last night. The 35-year-old mathematician, beside himself with jealousy when he learned the girl had married another man, had shot her and then turned his gun on himself. Recovering consciousness briefly after two blood transfusions, just before he died McGuire moaned:

"I must have gone mad. I was asking her to explain why she had broken with me. I guess I couldn't take it."

Last July 11, the girl married Dwight B. Danyew, 27, a salesman, in Troy, N. Y. when she she got back from her vacation, she broke the news to McGuire, her suitor for several years.

YOUTH SILENT ON CAPE TRIP

Lincoln, R. I., Sept. 6—George H. Comstock, Jr., 19, came home here after his "vacation" of 20 hours during which period state troopers combed Cape Cod in search for him, after his car was found abandoned in a lonely section near Cotuit.

Young Comstock's return to the Cape ranch from which he vanished was hidden in as much mystery as his departure. State troopers ran up against a blank wall when they questioned him. He refused to discuss his absence or any reason for abandoning his car with lights burning and the key in the ignition switch.

ELLIS MARKED OUT BEQUESTS

Worcester, Sept. 6—Hearing was to continue here today on the allowance of the will of Theodore T. Ellis, who left an estate of three million dollars.

According to evidence already presented in probate court, Ellis, former owner of the Worcester Telegram, and the New England Fibre Blanket Company of Worcester, had marked out practically all bequests in a will made in 1927.

Attorney George H. Mirick, former counsel for Ellis, said that at one time Ellis told him he would rather have the law administer his estate than to have it distributed under the terms of the "d'd instrument."

Red Fight in Strike Under Way Today

In this, the seventh article in a series revealing Communism's underground growth in New England, the Boston Evening American discloses steps being taken to spread the national textile strike and take it out of control of the American Federation of Labor. Communist orders, now in possession of this paper, are the basis for this expose.

(Copyright, 1934, for the Boston Evening American.)

The Communist party today called upon its leaders to take the textile strike in their own hands and force it upon other industries.

Orders radiating through New England, out of Boston, boldly and openly called upon Communists to spread the strike on one hand—and on the other wrest its control from the United Textile Workers of America.

The strike seeking a Communist coup followed the clash between "Reds" and union strikers at Pawtucket yesterday and was ordered by the New England district with headquarters in Boston.

"The strike must be a real strike . . ."

"The Communist Party is doing everything in its power to spread the strike . . ."

Communist arguments seeking control of the strike were based upon claims of the radicals that the United Textile Workers and the American Federation of Labor officials are really seeking to have the walkout fail. Orders issued from the New England Communist headquarters here follow:

"The great strike in the textile industry, involving a million workers (Ed. Note: A fair example of Communist exaggeration) is the most important action of a large section of the American working class.

"This strike is the culmination of a long series of grievances which the workers have piled up as a result of the unceasing abuses by the bosses and the attacks upon the living standards and the general conditions of the textile workers by the bosses of the textile industry.

"This strike is the best means by which the workers can better their conditions. The strike must be made a real strike. All workers, regardless of their trade union or calling, must come to the support of these heroic textile workers.

"The official leaders of the American Federation of Labor and the United Textile Workers Union have done everything in their power to sabotage the strike, which was called in spite of their resistance because the impatient rank and file delegates, coming from the most exploited sections of the working class to the convention of the U. T. W. held recently in New York, practically forced this action upon their leaders.

Intimidation Methods Flayed by Communists

"The textile workers must take the strike into their own hands, organizing the widest rank and file committees to lead in the picket lines, organize relief and militant struggle against every force sent by the employers against the workers.

"The Communist Party in every mill town as well as throughout the United States, is doing everything in its power to spread the strike and to organize the unity of all workers, organized and unorganized, to build one textile union in the industry controlled and led by the honest rank and file textile workers.

"The Communist Party protests most vigorously against the use of intimidation methods, such as the 'red' scare that has been played up by the press, the use of machine guns, police, police gas, militia and all other forces of terror and savagery used on the West Coast and other strikes and being employed by the bosses in the textile strike."

National Guard Asked to Join Glorious Fight

"No terror, no matter how repressive and murderous it may be, will stop the onward sweep of the workers once they are united in the struggle to better their conditions.

"The Communist Party calls upon the National Guardsmen to realize they are the brothers and sons of the working class, that their interests lie with those of the textile workers. The Communist Party calls upon the National Guardsmen to refuse to act as strikebreakers. The Communist Party calls upon the National Guardsmen to join with the strikers to help them win this glorious battle for their most elementary rights."

(New disclosures in the Communist drive for control of industry and government will be printed tomorrow.)

Firemen Reap Coin Harvest

Inspectors of the Malden fire department have found that inspecting fuses in residences is profitable business, for they have collected nearly a peck of pennies and nickels from homes where coins have been used to replace burned out fuses.

In cooperation with General Manager J. T. Day of the Malden Electric Company, the inspections are to continue until every service has been examined.

Because of the many fires occasioned by use of coins in place of burned out fuses, inspection was ordered to halt further trouble and results astounded fire and electric officials. Fire Chief William J. Dooling is expected to ask for a city ordinance with a penalty to prevent use of coins in fuse boxes.

LIFETIME HUNT FINDS FATHER

After a life-long search for a father whom he had never seen, Edward James Doherty, 29, of State street, North Adams, had today not only located his long missing parent here, but also had found himself a whole family of hitherto unsuspected half-brothers and half-sisters.

The father is Edward J. Doherty, Sr., of Bunker Hill street, Charlestown. He is a marine fireman, now employed on the Eastern Steamship liner Belfast, running between Boston and Bangor, Me.

Because the father was at sea when his mother died, young Doherty was given a home with an aunt. After his aunt's death he was placed in an institution and connection with the father was lost.

At the time of the younger Edward Doherty's birth, in 1905, Dad Doherty was on the high seas as a member of the crew of a transatlantic vessel.

FROM LONG KEY TO NOVA SCOTIA, the famous sportsmen and writer, REX BEACH, has matched his skill and vitality against the big game fish of the Atlantic! Below he tells how he lights a Camel after fighting it out with a heavy fish—and soon "feels as good as new!" Every walk of life makes its demands upon energy. Hence it is interesting to note how whole-heartedly other Camel smokers agree with Mr. Beach about the way Camels release their stored-up energy.

PHONE OPERATOR. Miss Marion Erickson says: "I smoke a lot! I enjoy a Camel every time I can catch a minute away from the board. Since I changed to Camels, I find I never have to think about nerves. And Camels are so mild and taste so good, too!"

RODEO CHAMPION. Eddie Woods says: "Believe me, I'm plenty tired at the end of a tough contest. And boy, does a Camel taste good when your energy is low! A Camel chases away that 'all in' feeling and in a few minutes I'm ready for the next event. I don't need to worry about constant smoking, for Camels don't upset the nerves."

REX BEACH TELLS YOU

how to get back vim and energy when "Played Out!"

TOBACCO EXPERTS ALL SAY:

"Camels are made from finer, More Expensive Tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."

"I have taken my share of big sailfish, marlin, and tuna," says Rex Beach. "I know what a rod-and-reel contest with these heavy fighters does to a man's vitality. When I've gotten a big fellow safely landed my next move is to light a Camel, and I feel as good as new. A Camel quickly gives me a sense of well-being and renewed energy. As a steady smoker, I have also learned that Camels do not interfere with healthy nerves."

Thousands of smokers will recognize from their own experience just what Mr. Beach means when he says that he lights a Camel when tired and "feels as good as new." And science adds confirmation of this refreshing "energizing effect."

That's why you hear people say so often: "Get a lift with a Camel." Camels aren't flat or "sweetish." Their flavor never disappoints. Smoke Camels steadily—as many as you want—their finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS do not get on the nerves!

SALESMAN. Kenneth B. Logan of Scarsdale, New York, says: "The selling game calls for healthy nerves. Meeting people all day long... trying to turn prospects into customers... the life of a salesman certainly tells on nerves! I smoke most of the time—but I smoke only Camels, and I'll tell you why I say 'only Camels'! Camels don't upset my nerves—and no cigarette can match Camels on flavor, either."

OLYMPIC SWIMMER. Miss Helene Madison, the Seattle, Wash. girl athlete who has broken nineteen Olympic and world's records in swimming. Miss Madison is devoted to Camels. She says: "I've been smoking Camels a long time, and I can definitely say that they don't interfere with my nerves. I enjoy Camels' mildness and they give me a refreshing 'lift' in energy when I feel tired out!"

WASHBURN ATTACKS WALSH ON NEW DEAL 'SOCIALISM'

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

In his first serious statement of the campaign since his endorsement as G. O. P. candidate for United States Senator, Robert M. Washburn, of Boston, flatly denounces the Roosevelt policies as "socialism" and charges that Senator David I. Walsh in pledging himself to support those policies has "surrendered Massachusetts to the President in a spirit of complete subservience."

Washburn, known for his wit and originality, places Socialism versus Massachusetts as the first great issue of the campaign.

"Only a Republican senator, independent of the Democratic national organization," he asserts, "can protect Massachusetts at this time."

STATE DRAINED

He holds that the state is being financially drained by the national government and that Massachusetts can take care of its needy, either by productive paid-for work, or under her welfare system, at far less cost than under that set up by the federal administration. Senator Coolidge, in promising to follow the lead of Walsh when he was elected, Washburn contends, leaves Massachusetts unrepresented at Washington.

"It is high time to oppose socialism and to protect the ambition, industry, prosperity and liberty of the high-minded, freedom-loving citizen," he exclaims. "Otherwise he is reduced to the level of Socialism where his life is to be that of the mule who works for a blanket, 13 quarts of oats, and nothing else. That is Socialism.

"Against Socialism I pledge myself. My opponent thinks first of the office to be won. That is my last thought, when Massachusetts and its form of government are jeopardized by Socialism."

CURLEY CHARGES ENVY

With full steam up, former Mayor James M. Curley, continues his onslaught against the Walsh-Ely-Cole combination. "Crucified on the cross of envy by small minds and small men," Curley, in rallies in various parts of the state, contended that they are seeking to "relegate him to oblivion not for acts of omission or commission, but purely because of hatred engendered by envy and without basis."

Former Mayor Thomas H. Duffy of Woburn, speaking in the interest of Curley, claimed that the Cole army is in full retreat and that Leo M. Harlow, permanent chairman of the Worcester convention, was reported as having made the "west bank of the Abajona river with the promise of a Superior court judgeship held tightly in his arms.

COLE LAUDS NEW DEAL

General Cole at Brockton, Taunton and Mansfield, recited the accomplishments in the saving of homes and affording relief under the New Deal and declared that the next governor must be one in sympathy with that program.

"Curley cannot be elected," Cole declared. "And if the Republican nominee were to be permitted to win he would place in effect his policies, which he has already stated as opposed to the New Deal."

Cole asserted that under the Home Loan Law, more than 14,000 homes have been saved in Massachusetts, most of which were in process of foreclosure. Under the ERA projects, he said, in August and in the last five months, $47,211,645 has been expended here for relief of all kinds and 68,781 persons employed. The Boston figures, he said, alone show 37,385 persons employed and total expenditures of $4,334,067.

FIGURES COMPARED

He compares these figures with but 15,000 placed at work in Boston under the CWA program last fall, "when Mr. Curley was mayor of Boston, despite the fact that this city had been allocated 22,000 jobs."

The General declared that this program of relief must continue as long as it is necessary but can't be unless the next Governor will cooperate with the President's policies.

Cole speaks tonight in Maynard, Dennison Memorial Hall in Framingham and at rallies in Marlborough and Waltham.

WALSH LAUDS COLE

Complete support of General Charles H. Cole for Governor was given by Senator David I. Walsh at a meeting of Plymouth County Democrats in Brockton.

Paying high tribute to General Cole, Senator Walsh said that he wanted Massachusetts to remain Democratic and, for that reason, it should nominate the Worcester ticket.

Stating that he had been Charlie Cole's friend for 30 years, Senator Walsh added:

"He is more than a Democrat. He is a trench Democrat, a Democrat in the years when Democrats were scarce.

"He is a man of absolute justice. He possesses all the attributes demanded of the exalted office of Governor."

Typhoon Wrecks Homes in Luzon

Manila, Sept. 6—Thousands have been made homeless by a typhoon which has raged two days in northern Luzon Island said reports received here today.

The typhoon in the provinces of Cagayan and Ilocos Norte caused heavy damage, destroying bamboo houses. No loss of life was reported.

thus far has been $216,000,000 in a year. One of Mr. Sinclair's plans, creditable to his kind heart, would have the state pay $50 a month for life to every three-year resident of California aged 60 or older. This plan alone, Mr. McAdoo says, would cost California taxpayers $300,000,000 a year, or $84,000,000 more than present total expenses.

There is another movement on foot with a big following to pay every American in old age a government pension of $200 a month. That, according to Mr. McAdoo's figures for California, would cost the taxpayers, who ultimately pay all bills, about twenty-eight billion dollars a year, more than the total national debt. It might be difficult to do that in these hard times.

But a country that punishes a man for letting an old horse starve should be ashamed to let any worked-out old man or woman die in misery. Old age pensions, long established in Europe, will come here.

Mr. Green, for the American Federation of Labor, demands a 30-hour working week, five days of six hours. The Fur Workers' Industrial Union of New York does better, 4000 strikers having settled with the employers for a 25-hour week.

Judge Gary, now in his grave, and probably glad of it, was wondering some years ago whether the 12-hour day could be abolished completely in the steel industry. New conditions move rapidly.

Asked when she thought a woman would be President, Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt said she hoped "not soon," not that she doubts woman's ability, but rather man's willingness to be ruled by a woman's judgment.

Wise men would worry not about the woman President's judgment, but about that of the man controlling decisions. Mrs. Roosevelt, herself, would make an excellent President. So would Miss Frances Perkins, who has a better mind and character than 99 out of 100 able men. And General Johnson's assistant, Miss Frances M. Robinson, as President, would create a great demand for cabinet places, only she is nowhere near the legal age, 35, and her cabinet would find it hard to keep its mind on dull routine.

Russia will be invited into the League of Nations, proposed for membership by France. We fuss because Russia owes American financiers a few millions lent when any child might have known better.

Russia owes the French, in good hard francs, more than six thousand million dollars. But France wisely looks ahead, wants Russia's friendship and help in case of trouble with Germany, and will have it, as before. The French are logical.

It is announced that young Prince Otto, good-looking young man of 22, heir to the Hapsburgs, will marry the Italian princess, Maria. This arrangement would be made only with Mussolini's approval, and may mean another Hapsburg on the Austrian throne.

You would think that Austria had had trouble enough with the other Hapsburgs, but Mussolini may have some workable plan, including, of course, his own indirect dictatorship.

Secretary Ickes replied to former President Hoover's attack on the Roosevelt administration, saying the liberty that interests Mr. Hoover is "the liberty of the exploiter." "Liberty of privilege is what they (Mr. Hoover) want," says Mr. Ickes.

Turning from Mr. Hoover to Senator Borah, who said liberty is fast disappearing, Mr. Ickes asks, "Who has lost his liberty?"

and possible violence, shut down their plants.

Strike leaders foiled one move in the Communist plot seeking control of the strike when Anne Burlak, "red flame" agitator, was forbidden to make a scheduled address in Fall River this afternoon.

"Civil War" Threat in Fall River Zone

George H. Cottell, organizer for the United Textile Workers, warned at Fall River that attempts to operate the mills under armed guard will mean civil war.

The violence at Warren, R. I., first precipitated by the flying squadrons, occurred at the King Philip plant of the Berkshire Spinning Company, with the arrival of 200 pickets from Fall River. The flying squadron quickly mobilized 2000 strikers.

They battled police, who used tear gas and clubs, rescued their leader who had been arrested, and finally forced the closing of the mill before being driven back by steel-helmeted state troopers.

Fall River's flying squadron was led by Mariano S. Bishop, president of the Fall River local of the U. T. W. The squadron swept into Warren at dawn and established picket lines at the plant before the 600 employes arrived.

First trouble occurred when police attempted to place Bishop under arrest, seizing him in the middle of the street. The crowd closed in about Patrolman James L. O'Leary and attacked him. Other police rushed to his assistance.

Troopers Quell Riot Then Guard Mill

There was a riot in progress in a twinkling, with strikers battering the police and police clubbing the strikers. Tear gas bombs were exploded but failed to disperse the crowd.

State police were rushed to the area and succeeded in establishing order after several fights. As a result of the demonstration only about a third of the workers who operated the plant yesterday reported today.

Troopers remained on guard and semi-martial law was declared in the area as the plant attempted to operate with reduced forces.

Bishop was not rearrested. The squadron next headed for Dighton and Taunton.

Barricade of Bags Erected in Street

Their object in Dighton was apparently the Mount Hope Bleaching & Finishing Co., but the sight of sand bags in the street, with special guards, carrying shotguns, behind them, caused a change of mind.

Throughout New England, as the flying squadron drive began, the strike continued to gain ground, although in many instances mill operators shut down themselves, putting a virtual lockout in effect, rather than risk the prospect of violence and property damage.

Approximately 133,000 of New England's normally employed 229,000 textile workers were estimated to be idle, either voluntarily or involuntarily, because of the strike.

Additions to striking employes were reported from four of the six New England states. They were Rhode Island, 3000; Massachusetts, 2000; Connecticut, 2000, and Maine, 1000.

Ely Refuses to Call Out State Troops

In Massachusetts at least 73,000 were out; in New Hampshire, 13,800; in Rhode Island, 18,000; in Maine, 3000 or more; in Vermont, 2800, and in Connecticut about 15,000.

The threat of strike in the ranks of the cotton garment workers, which have 2000 employed in Boston and other thousands in the outside mill centers, darkened the outlook.

Governor Ely, refusing to consider the use of the national guard or state troopers for the guarding of Fall River mills, as indirectly requested by the Fall River manufacturers, called upon the national strike leader, Francis J. Gorman, to name a union representative to confer regarding the charges of intimidation.

The Fall River intimidation charges were echoed in other centers today as the flying squadrons began their tours.

Many Mills Forced to Close Their Gates

Cobwebs began to gather on the spindles in New Bedford, Fall River, Manchester, N. H., and Dover this morning, with not a wheel turning in any textile plant in those centers.

Twenty-five New Bedford plants were shut down with 22,000 idle; 23 Fall River mills were closed with 23,000 out of work; the big Amoskeag at Manchester, N. H., and the plants in Nashua and Dover remained shut with no prospects of attempted reopening until the strike is settled.

Salem's single mill continued to operate.

Lawrence continued unscathed, with all mills operating but in the Lowell district the strike spread to close 10 of 14 mills with 5400 idle.

Union officials agreed not to use out-of-town pickets in Lawrence after a conference between Thomas F. Galvin, director of public safety, and Thomas H. Kelly, union organizer for Lowell and Lawrence.

In the Rhode Island area 65 plants were shut down with half the industry's workers idle in Pawtucket, Providence, Warren and scattered points.

In Maine the strike still centered at Waterville and Oakland, with the first threat of imported strike breakers being heard at Oakland. Nine Maine mills are idle.

In Connecticut more than half of the industry's workers were made idle with the closing of 30 plants.

A flying squadron of girl textile strikers, 400 strong, failed in an effort to secure a walkout of 500 employes of the Shelburn Shirt factory on Alden street, Fall River.

The danger of "civil war" if state authorities should intervene in Fall River was voiced by Cottell, who said:

"The manufacturers claimed the strike would be a washout and a flop. But now that we have been 100 per cent successful, they are crying "baby" and want outside protection so that they can operate.

"We hope they will not tempt this, for use of force might cause civil war. I base these statements on what is happening in the south where they are attempting to run the mills on wages lower than ever."

Horace Riviere, strike leader in New England, will go to Fall River and address a mass meeting of the strikers, planned for Berry Stadium. It is expected that 20,000 strikers will be present.

To a report from New Bedford that Ann Burlak would go into Fall River, Cottell responded today:

"If she does come to Fall River, we will try to make a deal with the chief of police so that he will let us take care of her. Nobody else seems to be able to handle her, but we'll take care of her all right."

WOMAN HUNTED BY U. S. IN CELL

No matter where federal agents believed they had trailed Frances Moreau, alias Mary Moreau and Mary Haley, it was no use—because the woman turned up today in Pittsfield jail, where she has been serving a term for larceny.

Federal officials have long been seeking the 65-year-old woman, according to United States Marshal John J. Murphy, on a charge of using the mails to defraud. She is declared to have lived once at Charlemont and to have been well known in the summer colony of Lee.

When she is released from Pittsfield jail on September 17, she will be taken to federal court for the start of proceedings to remove her to California, where a mails indictment is being held against her.

$10,000 FRAUD LAID TO BROKER

Charged with mishandling of more than $10,000 allegedly intrusted to him by the widow and daughter of Joseph Lyons of the city's legal department, Thomas L. Freeman, State street broker, was indicted today by a Middlesex county grand jury on two counts of larceny.

A warrant for Freeman's arrest was immediately issued.

The women allegedly victimized by Freeman are Mrs. Agnes Lyons and Miss Muriel Lyons, both of 62 Arborway, Jamaica Plain.

8 KILLED, DOZENS WOUNDED IN SOUTHERN RIOTING

MORE TROOPS RUSHED INTO WAR AREAS

Open Fire at Gates of Running Mill

Today's killings brought the total of strike casualties to 16, two men having been killed at Trion, Ga., late yesterday.

Pistols and shotguns took half a dozen lives at the Chiquola Mill, in Honea Patch, when members of a "flying squadron" from Belton, S. C., swooped down on the plant just before opening time today and demanded that it remain closed.

The management delayed the opening. Meanwhile loyal workers, all sworn in as deputy sheriffs, gathered in front of the gates. A dispute began with the "flying" pickets—200 strong.

A few minutes later there was a burst of firing, then another and another.

The ground was covered with dead and wounded. They were placed into ambulances and rushed to hospitals in Anderson so fast that not even an accurate count of the wounded was made.

However, all of the victims are believed to have been members of the picket squadron.

Dozen of 30 Men Wounded May Die

Preliminary examinations, hurriedly made on the battlefield indicated that more than half a dozen of the 30 wounded men are in a critical condition. Some of them, it was feared, might not survive the ambulance ride to the hospital.

L. O. Hammond, president of the mill, said that he did not know who started the shooting, but he added that it meant that the plant would not be re-opened.

Authorities in the town had feared an outbreak, he said, and had requested troops, only to be advised that the national guardsmen were being mobilized at other points.

Not Enough Troops for Martial Law

Informed of the pitched battle, Governor Ira C. Blackwood refused to declare martial law, saying that would be only his last resort. He said it would take 5000 or 6000 troops to enforce a martial law order, adding that he did not have so many men at his command. He also said martial law would disrupt all civil life throughout the state.

Leon Carroll, a 27-year-old striker, died in an Augusta, Ga., hospital a little later in the day of wounds received when a trapped policeman shot his way out of a crowd of picketers.

Still another striker died at Greenville. He was John Black, shot six times at the Dunean Mill, there, in what appeared to be an isolated incident—a personal argument between Black and one of the armed guards at the mill.

Meanwhile, troops were ordered to Marion and Concord, N. C., to check disorder that has prevailed there for the last 48 hours.

Troops March In As Two Are Killed

Three companies were ordered to Marion and two to Concord. Each place will be used as a concentration point.

Adjutant General J. Van B. Metts said the companies numbered 60 to 65 men each plus their officers' personnel, making 300 guardsmen and their officers who are to be on duty by morning.

The units to go to Concord are the machine gun troop of the 105th Cavalry, Statesville, under Captain Field, and Company F, 120th Infantry, Charlotte, under Captain Edwin C. Boyette.

The Governor's order was issued while R. R. Lawrence, president of the State Federation of Labor, was assuring union members in a radio address, "You have every reason to be jubilant over the general situation at this hour."

Reached by International News Service here, after receipt of the Governor's order, Lawrence declared:

"I think now there will be bloodshed in this state without a doubt. There is no real reason why the governor should call out the militia. He should confer with me before taking this action. He has not kept faith with me."

REPORTS OCT. 1

The conciliation board was directed to report to the President, through the Secretary of Labor, not later than Oct. 1.

Until this report is made, there appeared little likelihood that the President would take further action.

Mr. Roosevelt in naming the mediators acted at the suggestion of his National Labor Relations Board, headed by Lloyd Garrison.

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 6—Raymond V. Ingersoll accepts the nomination.

Named by President Roosevelt as a member of a board of three to inquire into the national textile strike, the mild-mannered Brooklyn Borough president and veteran labor arbitrator said:

"If the President wishes me to serve I do not see how I can refuse."

Steel-Helmeted Troopers Quell Rioting in R. I. Mill

When a "flying squadron" of 200 strikers from the Fall River war zone sought to shut the King Philip mill in Warren, R. I., today, they were met by stern resistance from the workers. In the fighting that followed, state troopers, all wearing steel helmets, were rushed to the mill. The troopers drove the "flying squadron" back and then placed guards over the plant. 4 Chimpanzees Win Draw, Test With Yale Children

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 6—Two members of the Yale University faculty today were as embarrassed as a California real estate agent caught in a rainstorm. The professors matched two of their children against four chimpanzees in a psychological test, and the result was declared a draw.

Just to make the faces of the savants a bit redder, the chimpanzees were not overly intelligent. The animals have been going to college for seven years and have yet to receive a diploma.

The experiment, conducted at the university, was described at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association here by Milton Forster of the Yale staff.

ALL REACT ALIKE

Regarded as simple but scientific, it consisted of measuring the time required for a chimpanzee and for a child to respond to a spectacle, a contact or a sound by pressing down a telegraph key.

The children were told to press the key the very second they saw the swaited sight, heard the sound or felt the touch. Although they have no brain trust members in their families' trees and in fact can't even speak English, the chimps then showed they were no dumbbells. Their reactions and the children's came out exactly alike.

The children then were bribed with the promise of a lollypop as an extra incentive, but the young apes, although not promised so much as an apple, still held the professors' offsprings to a draw.

TEST WITH ORANGE

The chimpanzees, four of the forty which Yale has bred since 1925, then qualified as modern Tarzans by going through a set of advanced problems with a show of brain power which left the professors' children agape.

An orange was placed in an open maze into which the chimpanzees could see. The animals couldn't reach the orange; they knew it and didn't even try. Instead, each one picked up a stick of the right length from an assorted collection and proceeded to roll the orange from side to side and up and down in the maze, testing detours and alleys until the orange rolled out of the box.

Today the chimpanzees claim the draw verdict really was a moral victory for them.

Strike Fails to Halt Work in This Plant

Atlanta, Sept. 6—One textile plant —a "closed" shop—is continuing to operate without a bit of trouble in the midst of the textile strike troubles.

This plant never has had a strike, a walk-out or a shutdown. Labor trouble is unknown there and it operates every day without a ruffle. Cavalry, Statesville, under Captain Yield, and Company F, 120th Infantry, Charlotte, under Captain Edwin C. Boyette.

STOKES HEADS DETECTIVES

The "ace" detective of the state, John F. Stokes, today assumed his new office as chief of the detectives of the Department of Public Safety, with the rank of captain.

Promotion was made by order of General Daniel Needham, commissioner of public safety, with the approval of the Civil Service Commission.

Stokes, promoted to the rank of captain was acting chief of detectives, Michael J. Barrett, who today begins his new duties as state police instructor.

NAVY SHIP USED TO SELL GUNS

UNIT ATTACKED

In a report Smith made to Spear, the former said:

"These two officers were not recognized."

Senator Clark (D), of Missouri, charged that the visit was "surreptitious and in violation of the navy department regulations."

Committee investigators are ready to submit evidence concerning the conversion of a U. S. navy cruiser into a "demonstrator" for the Driggs Engineering and Ordnance Company, a concern located in this country, which was trying to sell naval guns to Turkey.

Senator Nye (R.) of North Dakota, committee chairman, and Senator Pope (D.) of Idaho, committee member, admitted that objections to the revelation of certain documents had been made by at least one department of government.

ROOSEVELT HELPS

Nye said that in June he had appealed to President Roosevelt to forestall the reticence of governmental departments to aid the inquiry and that the President had ordered all governmental units to co-operate.

But Nye added that some departments now appear to be "unduly exercised" about the committee's disclosures.

The committee will hear evidence concerning the dispatching of the U. S. cruiser Raleigh to Istanbul, Turkey, to aid Driggs Company's sales campaign.

It was learned the cruiser was in Mediterranean waters in 1929, when the Navy Department sent orders for it to proceed to Istanbul. There the Turkish officials inspected its guns, which were of the same type as that proposed for sale by the Driggs Company.

SALE FAILS

Unfortunately for the Driggs organization, the Turks failed to buy.

Other evidence showed the Electric Boat Company paid in 1928 for the transportation to Europe of the wife and son of Captain Alfred G. Howe, chief of the United Naval Mission to Peru.

The company was selling submarines to Peru and the naval mission was a profound factor in the sales situation, according to the investigators.

The committee also will receive evidence concerning armament sales in Cuba before and after the flight of President Machado. Investigators have data indicating that the American Armaments Corporation played a prominent part in the revolutions and counter-revolutions in Cuba.

This new evidence will be considered after the committee completes the case of the Electric Boat Company, the first company examined, which has a contract to build three submarines for the American Navy.

Nye said he will develop evidence concerning propagandistic efforts in this country to raise the sales peak for submarines.

GRACE MOORE TO FEATURE VALLEE HOUR TONIGHT

Aside from the inclusion again of Lou Holtz, glib gabbing comic, the main "mike" attraction when Rudy Vallee ventures into the coast-to-coast air once more (WEEI), between 8 and 9 o'clock tonight, seems to be a gal named Grace Moore. Grace gets into the studio spotlight as a result of her current "One Night of Love" film feature, a brand-new Columbia Pictures production, which is due hereabouts very shortly.

Grace is of course an opera star, a musical comedy favorite, also a beauteous blonde. Being such, what could possibly keep her from the weekly Rudy Vallee Hour? There isn't any acceptable answer. Along with Grace during the above dial doings, listeners can expect to hear Ilka Chase and Ruth Easton, acknowledged to be accomplished dramatic artists. Then there's Brad Browne and Al Llewelyn, two funny fellows for fair, not to overlook the flowing of Lou Holtz, as already mentioned.

LOCAL LIGHTS

Here in Hub circles the "Artists Revue" half hour apparently has something striking to set forth (WBZ) from 10 until 10:30 this evening. John H. Wright, new right hand "mike" man to John McNamara, recently appointed program director at the Hotel Bradford broadcasting bailiwick, is proud of what will be wafted.

Selmo La Rochelle, coloratura soprano; Edith Belin, rapidly rising blues singer; Raymond Eaton, concert baritone, and last but not least, the gifted Jayshoff Sisters, two piano team, comprise the scheduled talent array.

Enthusiasts about wild and wooly Western tales should certainly tune in to the "Bar X-Days and Nights" network feature (WNAC) when it debuts tonight strikes. It's a story of six-shooting bad men, with Carson Robinson and his "Buckaroos" furnishing their typical cowboy musical background.

AIR ANNIVERSARY

That well known and equally liked "Showboat" setting (WEEI) observes a 100th network natal night as of 9 p. m. Accordingly, the jovial "Capt'n Henry" and his crew will carry on in characteristic birthday fashion. Lanny Ross, Annette Hanshaw, Conrad Thibault and Murial Wilson contemplate cutting the cake. Naturally they plan passing loudspeaker patrons a piece, in the hospitably true "Maxwell House" manner.

Best Bets Tonight

6:00 P. M.—WEEI—Regular chatter and novelty hits by the "Tattlers" with Vic Whitman.

7:45 P. M.—WBZ—More interesting "Jungle Stories" by Frank Buck of "Bring 'Em Back Alive" fame.

9:00 P. M.—WBZ—Half hour adventures airing of "Death Valley Days" in the Old West.

10:00 P. M.—WEEI—Sixty minutes of music and novelties under Paul Whiteman direction.

Best Tomorrow

8:15 A. M.—WBZ—Musical visit by the Don Hall Trio.

8:15 A. M.—WHDH—Modern and Classical Tunes with the Musical Revues.

9:30 A. M.—WEEI—Good Morning Melodies with Helen Barr, Edward Jardon and Del Castillo.

11:00 A. M.—WAAB—Household Hints and Cooking Recipes by Martha Lee. Boston Evening American Culinary Expert.

11:30 A. M.—WEEI—The morning Parade. A variety musicale.

ANCHOR VICTIM IDENTIFIED

The body of the man, found in the sea off Bass Point, Nahant, with a small anchor tied to his waist, was identified as that of Claudius P. Carpenter, 55, of Winthrop, Boston and Albany Railroad conductor.

Police said that a daughter of Carpenter recently committed suicide in Albany, jumping from the state office building there.

Identification was made when Albany police notified Lynn police that Mrs. Catherine Raftis, of Rensselaer, N. Y., informed them that she had heard of the body found at Nahant and believed it to be Carpenter's.

Match Burns Fatal to Holyoke Child

Holyoke, Sept. 6—A four-year-old girl, Claire Bilodeau, was burned to death here. The child was playing with matches at her home when her clothing became ignited.

Fireman Frank McGaugh, who lives in the same house, heard her screams and smothered the fire with a blanket. The child was rushed to a hospital, but died within a short time.

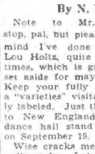
This Ear That Air

By N. F. T.

Note to Mr. Vallee:—Don't stop, pal, but please look! Bear in mind I've done much listening. Lou Holtz, quite a funny guy at times, which is granted, should be set aside for maybe a week or so. Keep your fully appreciated hour a "varieties" visitation, as originally labeled. Just the same, welcome to New England on your night dance hall stand near Worcester, on September 15.

Wise crack mean money, in the radio realm. Latest of these is the Charles Previn title for his sponsored "Silken Strings" time. Charlie facetiously calls it "Notes to You" and he thereby rates a back pat. New York echo emporium head men have developed a downright weakness for fellows (or feminine folk) who can coin clever catch lines to cover programs in prospect.



N. F. T.

Sponsors are rather easily sold on smart sounding stuff. Just in passing, how does this new "This Ear—That Air" column heading register with you readers? Far be it from your favorite evening newspaper proprietors to solicit fan mail, but for every letter we get following today's debut of still more space spread out for radio reporting—Thanks!

Dick Grant, the dynamic Yankee Network commentator (WNAC) who will positively broadcast a blast on the slightest provocation, claims that no printers ink potshot at him can ever be "rough enough" to rile him. Well, let's no forget he's having a hard time arranging his "As I See It" so that loudspeaker patronage is enthusiastic over a wide area. At least seven or possibly eight people out of 10 I have encountered today, never heard of, or from him.

He's working on the air (WNAC) at 6:20 every evening. Perhaps our far reaching daily circulation will help. It should "As I Oversee It" and he's entirely welcome. After all, Dick does a more or less good job almost, if not every time he turns out. We're not any too good friends, just an open-minded opinion.

Another ambitious air artist who often offers a bit of double barreled fire in the direction of press people, is Vic (WEEI) Whitman, or "The Tattler" to most 6:00 to 6:30 earcuppers down that particular other zone. Vic is a strapping young chap, eager to present things that are modern and up to the minute, except when it comes to "jokes" for his nightly program. No wonder I have so many lettere asking about his age!

Paul Whiteman has of course been reducing. Jacques Renard or any number of baton benders could easily claim the heavyweight (on a scale platform) orchestra leader championship over him.

Heaviest among the run of microphone musicians however, with this writing, seems to be one Herbie (WTIC) Berman, of the "Merry Madcaps" outfit in Hartford. Incongruously dubbed "Tiny" this happy-go-lucky lad plays his bass horn behind 265 pounds. Well a minute. He also stands 6 feet, 6½ inches high. He must wear size 14 shoes. If there be bigger broadcasting men than in New England, bring them on!

RUTH GORDON GIVEN CONTRACT BY M-G-M FOR SERIES OF COMEDY FILMS

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

Fay Templeton has been resting for some time in Boston. Thirty years ago she made a tremendous hit here in Chimmie Fadden. Five Minutes From Broadway, and on September 24, she returns as a featured player of another musical success, "Roberta." Miss Templeton plays the role in "Roberta" and the part is that of a famous modiste. The famous Fay manages here a reception similar to the one when she started her career here as a New York favorite in Chimmie Fadden. Fay is going to be a big part of the play.

Fay Templeton

She was interviewed in Miss Templeton's dressing room in those days. Miss Bailey was a reporter on the Evening Record and was assigned to get an interview with Miss Templeton. Miss Templeton refused to see her, but Miss Bailey was persistent and finally got by the doorkeeper. Miss Templeton was in a bad humor when Miss Bailey entered the room, but when she left she was in a good humor and the interview was published.

"The real reason that Frankie never sat on stage was that she couldn't. None of us could," is Miss Templeton's explanation of that.

Roberta will open the new season for the Colonial theater.

The Group Theater is hard at work at its summer headquarters in Edenvale, N. Y., preparing the three plays which it will present in Boston. Two of these plays, "Men In White," the Pulitzer Prize Play, and "Success Story," are pieces of the Group's past seasons. The new production is "Gold Eagle Guy," an ambitious panorama of American life in the latter half of the 19th century.

The young and successful company, which is being brought to Boston by a group of one thousand Bostonian sponsors led by Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins of Chestnut Hill, has proved in four years of Broadway activity one of the most competent and sound, artistic producing organizations the stage has had.

At Edenville observing the players at work, or in the dining room, or swimming or just sitting about and talking one sees the unmistakable marks of ease, freedom, good fellowship, mutual understanding and a splendid adjustment to life and work. A group of 40 actors and actresses is likely to be a temperamental, if not downright neurotic outfit, but there is no trace of that sort of thing in the Group Theater as far as was observed.

One is impressed by their maturity, by the absence of complexes, affection or self-consciousness and by their enormous good nature.

Many of the players have married since the group began. Wives are spending the summer with their actor-husbands as guests of the company. There are also eight dogs, 21 phonographs, three radios, 11 motor cars, a complete library of symphonic records as complete a collection of books on the theater as exists in any private library, a minimum of visitors, four colored waiters of considerable spirit and charm (one of them is Mac Simmons, who appeared in "Design for Living"), a staff of chambermaids and kitchen assistants who dish up the best work in order known in all classes and nationalities, ten appointees one child three cats 10 mosquitoes and a painless case of distemper on the part of Xander, Alexander Kickland's dog, who has lost 31 his fur.

New Screen Star Will Return to Hollywood After Role in Theater Guild Play

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 6 — Of course I am glad that Ruth Gordon has been signed to make movies. I have been suggesting it for months and wondering why some company didn't see movie possibilities in this clever, delightful comedienne. Now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has answered the query by signing her on a long term contract to make her special kind of comedies.

Mr. Gordon, who has been a visitor here, I hear, made a great success on the stage in "Years Ago" and "Serena Blandish" and now is going back to New York to get her hand to some more plays. Ruth has proved in other important parts, but it was as Serena that she charmed us. And the part of Tallulah Kingsley, society girl in New York, who is about to appear in "Divorce Me, Dear," is the part that I think she should play.

Louella O. Parsons

Speaking of Tallulah, after she has come back to Hollywood and made a picture or two, I hope she will be cast in the Myrna Loy role in "The Thin Man." Of course, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Thin Man" Myrna Loy is not just what you would call a "bad" woman. She is what you would term a "good bad" woman. She is the wife of a murderer, but she is not a murderess herself. She is a woman who has married for money, but who has fallen in love with her husband. She is a woman who has been married to a man who has been unfaithful to her, but who has forgiven him. She is a woman who has been married to a man who has been unfaithful to her, but who has forgiven him. She is a woman who has been married to a man who has been unfaithful to her, but who has forgiven him.

If she makes another picture she expects to come for New York's warm welcome, get her strength back and then go away from Hollywood and see her revised version of the show at Rose Caldwell's dream. Paramount, meanwhile, will get busy. Sylvia Sidney, Charles Bickford, for the part of Carlos who is the man, and more of a favorite with the film staying put.

Banks-French Bridal; on Trip to Bermuda

New York, Sept. 6 — With the marriage yesterday of Mrs. Livingston French and James Lenox Banks, Jr., comes the final touch of the three-ply scoop for "Cholly Knickerbocker," involving the affairs of the Astors and the Frenchs —the engagement of "Jack" Astor, and Eileen Gillespie, the Astor-French wedding and Mrs. French's romance with Mr. Banks. 'PERSONALITY IN PERFUME' CHART IS GUIDE TO UTMOST CHARM AND ALLURE

Given in Marriage

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 133

AT MARY'S offer to get Dicky and my mother-in-law for the "visit of inspection" to the nursery, which Katherine had proposed for the Braithwaites, there swept over me a poignant premonitory feeling of loss. My husband's tempestuous young niece has caused me frequent anxiety during the years that she has lived with us, but never has she failed in affectionate consideration for me. In the bustle surrounding the hurried wedding I had lost sight of the fact that she would no longer be a member of our household, and realizing this, I caught her hand and clung to it, leaving her question unanswered for the moment.

"Mary, child," I said unevenly, "I'm just realizing that I'm losing you—that you won't be living with us permanently any more. What am I ever going to do without you?"

"Silly," Mary said fondly, as she stooped and kissed me warmly. You'd better ask me what I'm going to do without you. But remember, darling," as her eyes danced, "you're not losing a niece. You're just gaining a nephew."

"Mary!" I threatened her with a burlesqued dramatic gesture, "That you should—"

"That I should hand you that!" she finished gaily. "Yes, I'll admit, it's pretty bad. But cheer up! I'll bet you'll be crazy about Noel as a nephew. You don't know how dutiful he can be to a charming aunt."

WORRIED FOR NOEL

"I'm crazy about Noel already," I told her, with not nearly as much insincerity as most protestations of the sort upon the part of prospective "in-laws." And indeed, I approved Mary's choice, and was very fond of the gentle, gifted boy. I had more fear for Noel's possible unhappiness in the coming marriage than I had of Mary's. It would take a man of infinite resource and tact, and possessed of a divine patience born of an overwhelming love, to hold the gifted flashing brain and winsome personality that was Mary; and I knew that failure to hold her would spell heartbreak for the sensitive lad.

"Don't you get too crazy," she warned me, with a prettily admonitory forefinger. "You're a heart-breaker, you know."

She dashed away without giving me a chance for a retort, returning almost immediately with Dickey and his mother close behind her and my father walking close to her, her hand slipped through his arm. It was like her thoughtfulness to include him in this visit of inspection by what old housewives would call "the Graham side," and I knew that while he was the least captious of men, he would be grateful for Mary's pretty strategy.

"Who is with Faith?" my mother-in-law demanded, when she saw Katherine standing with the Braithwaites and me.

MOTHER GRAHAM IN CHARGE

I knew that she did not mean to employ toward Katherine the tone in which she couched the words—one which would have been ashamed to employ to Katie unless she were guilty of some almost unpardonable solecism. It was not the first time Mother Graham had addressed the wife of my cousin and my own very dear friend as if she were a menial in her own employ, instead of a friend standing in my place and caring for my baby, in order to give me time for the production of the play I had written for Philip Veritzen.

It was Harriet Braithwaite who broke the hurried hush. But studiedly casual speech, as Katherine's eye darkened and the rest of us stood aghast.

"Why should she need any one?" Harriet said, laughing lightly. "If I know Madge, the windows are securely barred, and I don't believe even the most precious baby in the world— and of course I don't doubt she's that—could get out of her crib at her age."

She had given Katherine time to recover from the thrust, and my little kinswoman faced us with head held high and a gallant, mirthful smile playing around her lips.

"I'm not so sure," she said gaily, "I want you to appreciate that she is the most wonderful baby ever born. I shouldn't be surprised to see her trying the latest dance steps upon the nursery floor when we get there. But she isn't alone. Junior and Roderick are stationed in the nursery, with instructions to call me if she cries."

Richard Second and Roderick's mother-in-law sniffed. "They're probably tickling her to make her laugh. Come on, all of you! I'm going up there immediately."

She swept ahead of us and my father, with his usual courtesy, hurried ahead and offered her his arm. With her finger on her lip and a merry glance at me, Katherine skimmed out of another door, and I knew that her fleet feet would carry her through the kitchen and up the back stairs to the nursery before my mother-in-law should reach the top of the front stairway.

But when we reached the second floor, there came to our ears the unmistakable wail of a baby.

Beret Ensembles

Discovered in the welter and confusion of the Paris openings is a grand accessory ensemble. Agnes created the big green velvet beret, which has a wide border of soft shirring. The bag looks exactly like the beret, and has a hidden round frame, while the dark green pumps have a circular bit of shirred kid at the instep instead of the usual bow.

Buying and Applying Scents Carelessly Is a Major Cosmetic Crime

By Juliet Shelby

IF MEN NO longer write poetry about the devastating, seductive scent of Milady's tresses, it isn't because good perfumes are no longer made, but rather because modern woman has ceased to make an art of using them.

You don't have to rival Cleopatra—who by the way has the reputation of having used more perfume than any 10,000 women either before or after her—to prove to the world and your best beau that alchemy is but a legend.

The Greeks not only had a name for every perfume, but actually used a different scent for every part of the body. No siren of history's pages dared to overlook the magic power of perfume.

Perfume, even more than clothes, must be chosen to suit ones personality. Heavy, languorous odors are for the exotic, dark-haired beauty, not the dreamy-eyed ingenue type with corn-colored hair and peaches-and-cream complexion. Using the wrong kind of perfume is as incongruous as a red-headed woman wearing a strawberry-pink bathing suit.

Scents should be selected with great thought and at one's leisure. To rush up to the cosmetic counter and purchase an ounce of costly perfume unsuited to your type or for the occasions which you wish it for, is a folly that is exclusive with our Twentieth Century mode of living.

To capture added glamour for your intriguing new fall clothes, you'll need to choose your perfume with the care of the connoisseur. If you want to know what kind of perfume to wear with furs, or a scent that is a universal favorite for dress-up occasions, or a fragrance that will create a Dresden-doll aura about you, write for my Personality in Perfumes Chart. You will find many helpful suggestions for fall selections.

Dark Circles Under Eyes

Question: In the last few months my eyes have developed large, puffy, dark rings under them. Can you tell me how I may cure this condition?

W. F. Allston.

Answer: Puffiness and dark circles under the eyes may be due to lack of rest and sleep, poor circulation, inactive elimination or eye strain. Get at the reasons for this condition and try to correct them.

A good local treatment is to place compresses of cotton over the eyes, wrung out of cold water and drenched with witch hazel, cold tea or other astringent lotions. Smooth cream about the eyes first, and if your eyes feel very tired, use hot instead of cold compresses. Both are good. Relax as long as possible. If you cannot correct the condition by good care and facial treatments, it might be well to consult your doctor, for it may be due to some internal derangement.

SINGLE-BREASTED, SHADOW CHECK

A SUIT that's always in good style and good taste. In a medium blue-gray it has two buttons, regular flap pockets, and notched lapels. Its characteristics are freedom through the shoulders, in the soft rolling front, and the molded chest. Correctly ensembled with it, as shown by Mr. Malcolm L. Harvey, are dull black soft leather shoes, a blue and white tie of lively pattern, a shirt with tiny clip figure, and a soft gray hat. If you would like to know where this outfit may be seen in Boston, phone Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write in care of the Boston Evening American.

Serve Oysters Hot on Fall Menu

By Martha Lee

WITH THE arrival of the first "R" month of the fall, oysters are once again with us.

While oysters are still a novelty, many of us enjoy eating them raw. But when oysters have been in season for several weeks, housewives begin to look around for ways in which they can serve oysters hot. The number of oyster recipes is legion, for almost every famous chef has contributed some recipe for cooking oysters. But here are a few tried and true oyster recipes. And any one of them will do you honor when you serve oysters for supper on a chilly fall night.

OYSTERS ON TOAST

Chop fine one pint of oysters. Season with salt, cayenne and nutmeg. Melt one tbsp. of butter in a saucepan and stir in the minced oysters. In a separate dish, beat up the yolks of two eggs with one gill of cream and stir in with the oysters. As soon as the eggs set, serve on slices of buttered toast garnished with parsley.

DEVILED OYSTERS

Take one pint of oysters and chop fine. Put into a saucepan with one tsp. of melted butter and a pint of cream. Season with cayenne and salt and add ½ cup of rolled cracker crumbs. Put on the stove and allow to simmer for 5 minutes, stirring gently. Then put in a baking dish, sprinkle bread crumbs and bits of butter over the top and bake until the top is a rich golden brown.

OLD STYLE ROAST

Put one pint of oysters in a deep tin. Season with salt, cayenne and one teaspoon of finely chopped onion. Place a thin slice of bacon on each oyster, sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over the top and bake. Garnish with parsley and serve with slices of lemon.

OYSTER CHOWDER

Chop 50 good sized oysters. Prepare one cup of finely chopped celery and 2 cups of cold boiled rice. Put a layer of the celery in the bottom of a saucepan, then a layer of rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all the materials are used. Pour over 1 cup of boiling water. Cook slowly for 25 minutes. Beat up the yolks of 2 eggs, with 1 cup of milk add this to the chowder; stir carefully for few minutes and serve hot.

Seven Piece Woolen Ensemble Is Complete Wardrobe

By Gertrude Michael

IN SPITE of the difference in the climate and the fashion seasons here in California I still have one Eastern habit to which I cling. I select one complete fall costume long before the midsummer months wane and take their muslins, organdies and backless tennis frocks with them.

Here is the costume I've chosen to start the new season off. The fabric is black wool and there are seven pieces to the ensemble. Of course I don't wear them all at once but I can change them around and give the effect of having about three costumes in one.

There is a black wool frock with which I wear a plaid vest, a black scarf and add the detachable plaid cuffs to the topcoat of black wool. Sometimes I substitute a plaid skirt with a black jumper, a plaid scarf and eliminate the cuffs. I wear a black hat and gloves and carry a black bag, of course, but could any costume be more appropriate for traveling?

Just think of all the ways you can change this type of ensemble around even on the longest train trip.

Removal of Dummy's Entries

By Josephine Culbertson

[This is one of a series of articles in which Mrs. Culbertson explains certain principles of the new Culbertson System of Play. The examples and rules given by Mrs. Culbertson in these articles have never been published heretofore and are exclusive in Boston with the Boston Evening American.]

Even though it is not always possible to be confident that Dummy's entries can be removed, when Dummy's cards threaten the possibility that Declarer can discard on an established suit, the first plan of the defense must be to remove the cards which furnish entry to that suit, and unless the entry killing play interferes with some better plan by which the contract may be set even the barest possibility of success should be taken into consideration. An Ace-King in Dummy should often be attacked even to win a trick in that suit and save the entries, or cost Declarer his only a doubleton and after two leads will have no card with which to put the suit in.

East, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♡	1♠	Pass	2♣
Pass	3♠	Pass	4♠
Pass	5♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

In response to East's opening heart bid, West opens the heart 8 against South's four-spade contract. Dummy plays the nine because otherwise East could force South's King with the nine and be in a position to cash two heart tricks when next on lead. After the heart 10 is played East can do no better than win with the Ace, and now in reviewing the situation can readily see that South, if his hand contains three hearts will be unable to be able to discard one of them on a club.

East controls the club suit for two rounds, and will be able to shut off South's club route to the Dummy unless South holds four clubs, in which case no discard will be available. But even though South has only three clubs, the diamond Ace-King will remain to furnish constant communication from the South to the North hand.

East's first thought must therefore be to remove these diamond entries. With this in mind he immediately leads the deuce of diamonds.

South plays the Jack, hoping that East has the Queen, but West covers and North's King wins. Now three rounds of trumps are played, after which South leads the deuce of clubs and finesses Dummy's ten. East wins the Queen and leads another diamond. This takes out North's last diamond entry. At the point North leads the club King and East is faced with a problem.

East refuses to win the trick because South played the eight of diamonds on the second round. Unless South was falsecarding, this would be the last diamond he had. This would place South with two diamonds and consequently three clubs (unless South held four hearts originally, in which case he must at this point give up two heart tricks).

After East holds up on the second round of clubs, South is powerless to avoid the loss of a club trick and a heart trick in addition to the two tricks already lost and the contract is defeated.

East's play of leading a diamond into Dummy's Ace-King does not appear so sensational nor so difficult as it would if East's lead had been into a diamond holding of a A Q 4 instead of A K 4. Nevertheless, the situations are identical and East should make the diamond lead even though Dummy holds Ace-Queen. From East's position there is no difference between an Ace-King and Ace-Queen in Dummy, if East does not hold the King.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

Simplicity for Schoolroom

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9109

While a school girl may be as smart as can be, there is only a certain kind of smart permitted here—and this is it. Her clothes must be first of all simple, then trim and comfortable and young. From the little round yoke buttoning over in the front to the inverted pleats fanning out at the bottom, every detail of this dress is youthful and attractive. Many materials would be suitable for it —angora, wool, jersey, challis or even cotton—if your particular daughter wears cotton in cool weather. It's an easy-to-make little affair.

Pattern 9109 may be ordered only in sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16. Size 12 requires 2¾ yards 36 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Ten-Foot Train for Autumn Bride

By Annice Brink

ANXIOUS moments of the groom at the altar are going to be rivalled and probably exceeded by the troubles of the attendants who are to follow in the wake of the Autumn 1934 bride's train.

Nine to ten feet of satin train will slither down the aisle, and with the bride's head in the clouds where it should be, the task of managing such a lovely but unwieldly thing in and out of limousines, between the pews, and away from the big black shoes of the ushers, will devolve on a hapless maid of honor.

Uncountable rows of buttons are used on some of the loveliest gowns—one model having close-set satin covered buttons extending from the nape of the neck in back to the waist, and from wrist to elbow on the long, tight sleeves.

A cuff neckline makes a frame fitting for a slender neckline. And the same gown has an interesting manner of distributing picturesquely the immense yardage required for the ten-foot train which sweeps out in an oval line. The skirt is pencil slim and straight in front, in back three inches of shirring start the train below the normal waistline in a curved line which follows the fan of the train.

When the gown is of such classically heavy satin, the color in most cases tends to a mellow old ivory without the blush cast that was the favorite of spring brides.

In lace, the pure white seems to be the favorite, and here again long, slim sleeves and trains that rival a peacock's in sweep and grace are used.

Raise Hat to Servant

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please inform me if it is correct to raise your hat to a servant (female) upon being admitted, or when meeting her on the street, if the person is familiar with the household, or not? TOM.

The minute a servant opens the door to admit a man, the man takes off his hat. And when, on the street, a man meets a woman servant whom he recognizes, he politely raises his hat to her as he would do to any other woman whom he greeting on the street.

To paraphrase Bobby Burns, "A woman is a woman, for a' that."

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

MOONEY DENIED FUNERAL PLEA

By Associated Press

Sgt. Frank Mooney [illegible] Sept. 6. The last hope of Thomas J. Mooney that he might be allowed to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Mary Mooney, faded today after announcement by Acting Governor Frank F. Merriam of California that only a pardon or parole could release him, even temporarily, from San Quentin prison.

"There is no other legal way," the executive informed the American Civil Liberties Union, which asked that Mooney be released under guard from the prison where he is serving a life sentence for the San Francisco 1916 Preparedness Day bombing.

The funeral for Mrs. Mooney will be held at the Civic Auditorium [illegible] Saturday.

3 FAMILIES FLEE $15,000 FIRE

An o'd Dorchester landmark was missing today, following a $15,000 two-alarm fire which destroyed a two and a half story barn on Gibson street, menacing the entire Fields Corner section.

Thousands of old telephone books stored in the building fed the flames and generated intense heat. The three-story wooden apartment house, adjoining the barn, was ignited. A two-hour battle by firemen was necessary to get the flames under control.

CHILDREN SOUND ALARM

The fire was discovered by Charles A. McSweeney, 7, and his sister, Margaret, 11, who noticed the flames from the window of their home next door. They called their mother, Mrs. William McSweeney, who sounded the alarm.

The McSweeney family, who lived on the second floor, the family of Charles J. Lyons on the first floor, and Mrs. Eleanor Gurnity and her daughter, Mary, on the upper floor, were driven to the street.

STREET CARS DELAYED

Employes of the city yard nearby moved two five-ton trucks belonging to William F. Prout, a mover, to safety. They also removed city equipment to a safe distance.

Commuters on street cars between Fields Corner and Neponset were delayed more than an hour.

MARRIAGE OF GIRL IS FOILED TWICE

This Is Life
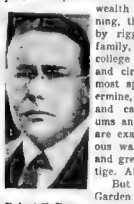
ROBERT E. ROGERS



Robert E. Rogers

Somehow, I have always considered a horse show as one of the best examples of Thorsten Veblen's theory of conspicuous waste as a support of capitalism. The strong man gets his wealth by strength and cunning, then justifies his wealth by rigging up his wife and family, his pastor and favorite college president in clothing and circumstances of the utmost splendor. Diamonds and ermine, stained glass windows and carillons, new gymnasiums and Gothic houses—these are examples of the conspicuous waste by which the rich and great maintain their prestige. Also horse shows.

But I was thinking of the Garden or Arena show, under the electric light, a parquet full of State Streeters in sable cloaks and stiff white shirts, visiting Italian cavalrymen, and horses worth their weight in gold. Last week I saw a little horse show, under the blue sky, in a dirt ring back of a big white barn out in West Rye, N. H. You sat in cars around the ring, or strolled back and forth behind them, keeping out of the way of the horses warming up.

I had asked one of the local farmers if the show would be worth going to.

"Oh, yes," he said, "there will be some good horses. But it's always too one-sided. Blank always gets most of the prizes."

And sure enough so it was. The Blank family, transported thither in three motors, could hardly be ignored. All the four children rode, did fairly well clean up the show. There were enough cups and ribbons left to make a good showing for the others, but one could see how the others—local people, gentlemen farmers, stables exhibiting their string—felt about competing against unlimited money. When the Blanks left, the youngsters' roadster carried a good string of red and blue and red ribbons.

And yet the whole business was simple enough. Their horses were beautiful, though not—to my amateur eye—necessarily more beautiful than some of the others they surpassed. And the Blank horses were ridden by their young folks—not stars in the ring by any means—instead of by the hard faced, black-liveried professionals who reminded one of a circus high-school act instead of a horse show. In fact the only example of conspicuous waste I noticed in the Blank family was that Paterfamilias wore riding breeches without riding. He did his riding in a car.

I enjoyed every minute of it except the last five. It was to a certain extent a neighborhood show. The riding teacher who promoted it had probably taught most of the young people to ride. A few of the entries were professional show exhibitors, their big vans waiting behind the ring, their horses equally professional, cropped manes tied with red and yellow ribbons.

The best fun was the jumping and the children. No, the best was the children doing the jumping. That, I suppose, is the way horsemen and horsewomen are made. Put them on a horse as soon as they can hang on, teach them as well as possible, and trust to time to make them horsemen—or not.

My real thrill of the afternoon came when a mite of a boy—he looked to be not 10 years old—no bigger than a whipstitch, with a thatch of yellow hair, set up on what looked to be an awful high horse, won first in the young people's jumps, competing against big hulks of high school boys and girls. His sister rode too. I saw them both entered at Myopia a day or two later. That slim kid will be doing cross-country racing and playing polo before he gets to college. You can see it in him. His mother is a well known modernist painter of considerable talent. Another variety of conspicuous waste.

There was another kid, not over eight, who never let her horse stand. She was a cautious little thing, blonde, with a cherry colored cap. She rode with considerable care on a pony she called Sugar. She enjoyed herself every moment and came up for her fourth prize grinning all over. She won the balloon race prize by the simple expedient of staying out of danger until everybody's balloon was smashed and outlasting them all.

The last five minutes I spoke of above furnished the accident seemingly inseparable from such occasions. This time the fault lay in the scheduling of the game called Balloon Race, in which children on horses try to burst balloons, one tied to every child's back. In my opinion it is a very dangerous game, full of possibilities of trouble for children with unsure seats on nervous high spirited horses they haven't strength to control. Either the horse tripped or the girl fell off—or both simultaneously—the horse fell on the girl, she was unconscious for a time, they had to carry her out of the ring. I never found out what had happened, broken leg or internal injuries, or what. But they lugged her off and the game was resumed. I suppose they kept going to keep the children's nerve up.

And, after all, the horse is coming back, we are told. It may be really advisable one of these days to have a few people about who know how to ride. Shouting, "The Californians are coming!"

FOOD PRICES JUMP 14 P. C.; BUDGET PLAN SUGGESTED

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

This is the second of a series of articles on the increasing cost of living and how it may be met with proper economy measures.

The average grocery bill is 14.1 per cent higher today than it was in June, 1913.

Foods in general, as part of a rising cost of living, are going up in price. Never before has there been such need for wise selection in a well-managed household.

Wives today must acquaint themselves with food values and food standards. They must know how to get the most for their money.

If the housewife is to stretch out the 1914 dollar to the very last penny she must know what her foods stand for and how they can be substituted and interchanged in daily menus not alone to pamper the appetites of her husband and children but to protect their health

DIVIDING FOOD MONEY

Food money, says Miss Blanche F. Dimond, nutrition supervisor at the Community Health Association, should be divided into fifths. And in the planning of spending, as much should be spent for fruits and vegetables as for meat, fish and eggs.

That is:

One fifth, more or less, for vegetables and fruits.

One fifth, or more, for milk and cheese.

One fifth, or less, for meats, fish and eggs.

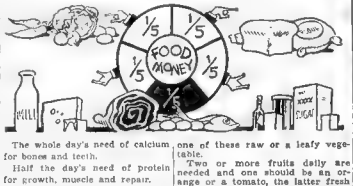
One fifth, or more, for bread and cereals

One fifth, or less, for fats, sugar and other groceries.

DIET ESSENTIALS

Miss Dimond points out that

A quart of milk, together with about 10 slices of whole grain bread and a serving of a raw vegetable or canned tomato or an orange, will give to your body:



The whole day's need of calcium for bones and teeth.

Half the day's need of protein for growth, muscle and repair.

More than half the day's need of energy for work and play

Vitamins for growth and vigor.

"For the other half of the day's needs, use a food from each of the previously stated groups—vegetables, fruit, meat or meat substitutes, cereal, fats and sweets," Miss Dimond explains.

QUART PER DAY

From a nutrition standpoint, every child ought to have a quart of milk a day. If this is not possible, then at least a pint. Every adult ought to have a pint, or again, at least one cup day.

Milk is necessary to children because it contains an abundance of the bone-making materials for the growing body. The same materials are needed by adults to keep their bones, teeth and other tissues in repair. Probably American diets, according to official findings from Washington, are more often deficient in bone-making properties, that is calcium, than in any other chemical element.

MOST FOR MONEY

If you have all the money you want to spend for food? spend one-fifth of it for milk and cheese.

If your food budget is a modest one, spend a fourth of it for milk and cheese.

If you must cut your food costs to the limit, spend one-third of your money for milk and cheese.

This is what nutrition specialists and food economists say about the importance of milk in the diet of a person. There is no other single item that furnishes so many different kinds of food value or gives you so much for your money.

According to Miss Dimond, an individual needs, in addition to milk, a whole grain cereal at least once a day, whole grain bread at every meal, two or more vegetables daily, one of these raw or a leafy vegetable.

Two or more fruits daily are needed and one should be an orange or a tomato, the latter fresh or canned.

One serving at least daily of meat or fish with meat substitutes, such as milk, eggs, cheese, dried beans or peas; in addition, three level teaspoons of butter daily anad of other fats for the child and five for the adult; and of sweets, seven level teaspoons of sugar daily anad half cup molasses every week.

Family budgeteers could hardly go wrong if they followed this schedule.

(Tomorrow the basis for estimating allowances will be given.)

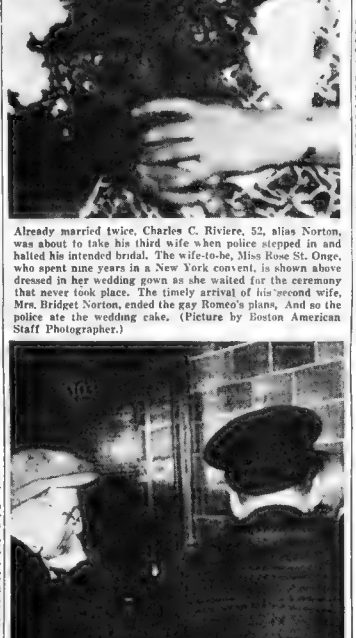
Law Steps In to Stop Bridal

Already married twice, Charles C. Riviere, 52, alias Norton, was about to take his third wife when police stepped in and halted his intended bridal. The wife-to-be, Miss Rose St. Onge, who spent nine years in a New York convent, is shown above dressed in her wedding gown as she waited for the ceremony that never took place. The timely arrival of his second wife, Mrs. Bridget Norton, ended the gay Romeo's plans, And so the police ate the wedding cake. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)



His third attempt at marriage ends in station. Charles C. Reviere, shown above as he was booked by the Cambridge police after they interrupt his wedding.

N. H. 5-DAY LAW, POLICE HALT WEDDING

Twice in two days Miss Rose St. Onge, 27 of Green street, Cambridge escaped marriage to a man alleged already to have two wives. It was revealed today as Charles C. Riviere, 52, alias Norton, was arraigned in East Cambridge court.

Riviere, lodger on an adjoining house, was held in $7500 for the grand jury on a charge of perjury of oath in filing a marriage statement yesterday at Cambridge City hall.

9 YEARS IN CONVENT

The alleged perjury was committed in securing a license to marry Rose who is only three months out of an Albany, N. Y. convent, where she spent nine years.

The disappointed intended bridegroom, arrested only three hours before yesterday's planned ceremony, nearly married the girl Tuesday in an elopement to Nashua, N. H., it was revealed, but the five-day law foiled the elopement.

Undaunted by this failure, the bridegroom and the convent girl returned to Cambridge, applied for a license for the second successive day, obtained a waiver of the five-day law there and were given the license.

Wedding guests were assembled in the wedding cake was ready in the Green street house and a visit to the minister was imminent when Rose overheard a conversation between Riviere and his nephew's wife, Mrs. Genevieve Craigie of Cambridge, in which she confronted him with his previous marriages.

A short time later, Mrs. Bridget Reviere of Cambridge, claiming to be the second wife, arrived at the house. Riviere fled, but when he returned to his room next door he was arrested for his alleged pose as a widower.

SISTER TELLS STORY

Rose's younger sister, Mrs. Frances Lewis, a nurse, with whom Rose lives, told the broken romance today. She said:

"About three months ago I received word that was unhappy in the convent and I went there and took her out. A short time later, I went away for a week's rest. During that time, Rose wrote to me saying she had a surprise for me, a boy friend. She said he was nice.

"She always came to me for advice and when I returned, she introduced me to oNrton or Riviere. He was a boarder next door, I knew him. I also knew that he had once taken a woman to the house.

DENIES MARRIAGE

"I brought him into this same living room to talk with him. 'I don't know what your game is,' I said. 'How about your wife?' He said, 'I'm not married. That woman didn't have a place to sleep, and I brought her in.'

"Last Sunday, I learned a police officer had come to the house looking for Rose. A boarder said she was not in, and added, 'You know, she's going to be married this week.' The police officer said, 'Maybe!'

"When I learned of his visit, it puzzled me. Now I know that it was his wife who asked the police to investigate."

NEW YORK, Sept. 6—Peculiarly enough, acrobatic and so-called dumb-acts are happier than ever. While their ranks have thinned and engagements are scattery, they no longer have to endure that cruel audience slight known as a walk-out. Or hear the cry of vaudeville's curse: "May all your children be acrobats!"

Such acts usually opened or closed a show. If they did not have to face the indifference of late arrivals reaching their seats they were deserted by commuters racing for trains. Always their efforts had an atmosphere of confusion. Scarcely ever did they get the applause their due.

Transplanted to the continuous movie houses, they now as a general rule precede the feature film and as a result they have the biggest audiences, and audiences not tired out. Also their cast have more pretentious settings. In this atmosphere many are "stopping shows."

Dumb acts must be well trained and hazardous to win engagements. Four and five times a day they risk their necks. Due to the nature of their calling, they live cleanly. Acrobats are almost invariably church-goers and few wind up in homes for indigent players.

Former Mayor John P. O'Brien is called New York's "forgotten man." In his brief flare in politics he went out like the proverbial light so quickly indeed that he is rarely recognized when he appears in public. He was a quiet, family fellow, too self-effacing to follow so soon after the spectacular Jimmy Walker. A kindly man, his tenure of office always reminded me of Wells' hippopotamus picking up a pea.

Correspondents bither and yon write that among the most courteous replies to fan mail are those of Major Bowes, Harry Richman, Fred Allen, Ed Hill and Gracie Allen. Many elderly and lonely ladies in forlorn way places have told me from time to time of sustained correspondence with Harry Richman that brightens their lives. For one with such a devastating reputation as a lady killer, that has a very pleasant ring.

Attention to fan mail is a mooted question among established artists. Some believe careful answering is an asset and others think it has little value. There are precedents for both schools. Mary Pickford has been a devoted replyer through the crowded years. Will Rogers is appreciative but seldom answers. Each is vastly popular. Chaplin pays little attention to epistolary praise and Marie Dressler would often sit up all night to reply to certain letters that pleased her.

There was once a nebulous unwritten law among legitimate stars that puffs from newspaper or magazine writers should not be acknowledged. Mansfield, Sothern and Marlowe and such believed it. The theory was that ordinary courtesy might appear to be courting favor. Along the same reasoning dramatic critics were not supposed to join the Lambs. But the law is rarely observed any more. Stars do not hesitate to send a note or telegram of appreciation when they have been singled out for especial flattery. Which is as it should be.

Of all great artists, Caruso was most genuinely thrilled by the enthusiastic fan letter. He was like a boy with a new top, carrying it around in his pocket and jockeying for some excuse to bring it out and read to whoever would listen. He kept a precse file and later all such missives were carefully preserved in indexed scrap-books now owned by his wife in Venice.

Thingumabobs: Joseph P. Kennedy had never made a public speech until he headed the security exchange commission . . . It cost him four nights' sleep . . . Augustus John, famed London portrait painter, washes his own smocks. Superstitution! . . . Babe Ruth has his wife drive home with him from ball games so he won't stop at hot dog stands . . . Dutch Schultz is reputed to dine nightly in a restaurant near the Winter Garden . . . Bill Klem, the umpire, will go anywhere to see a Popeye the Sailor animated cartoon . . . Tony Sarg, the marionette man, was the first diner at the Brevoort's sidewalk cafe . . .

MAD MILLIONS

By CHARLES GRANT

CHAPTER XXVI

"This came for you today," Mrs. McCarthy said, giving her a square package. "You'd as well open it here."

With no feeling of apprehension, Cathleen unwrapped the parcel. "Oh . . . it's my bag she said. "I forgot it yesterday. He's sent it after me."

She laid the bag down with her hat and gloves, and it was not until he was hurrying up the steps of her rooming house the next morning that she had occasion to open it.

She was so startled and dismayed by what she saw, that she sought a secluding corner where she could stand until she recovered from the shocking discovery.

Seward had explored her bag! Oh how could he! And he knew now the fate of his bracelet. What must he be thinking? That she was a liar and a cheat! What else could he think?

She hurried down the elevated steps intent only on getting the returned bracelet into the mail with all speed, minus a delay. She ran into a stationery and bought a box, paper, and sealing wax. She wrapped the package, addressed it to Seward at Gainesville, and mailed it. The hateful ornament was now safe in government care.

HURT BY SEWARD

Only then did she realize how seriously Seward had hurt her. Seward whom she had thought her friend! Seward, on whose account her parents were alienated from her! What had she left now in the world where everyone thought her a bad girl?

What a fool she was! He had made her love him love her unwillingly, love the happy, the unreasonably happy hours they had spent together, love the kiss he had given her on the railway platform.

Until this instant Cathleen had not clearly understood what was going on in her heart. All her life she had been too busy to be sentimental to read love stories or dream the romantic dreams of girls who have no responsibilities and no worries.

Had she known the nature of her emotions she told herself bitterly she would never, never have gone out with Seward, courting unhappiness courting temptation. His world and her were so far apart marriage between them was unthinkable. Her father would oppose such a match just as bitterly as Ingram himself. Her clear knowledge that there could be no happiness for her with Seward would have kept her out of his company, had she recized that she was springing to life in her heart.

All of this, however, was water under the bridge, flowing past with a murmur of silver music never to flow forever. She could weep a little over the memory of a wasted sweetness but there was a hard core of bitterness at the center of her pain. The clean-cut spirit of love had turned to hate.

Yes, she hated Seward. Hated him! It was bad enough to find out her piteous little secret. He was unforgivable so cruelly to taunt her with it. Had the heroine passed the bracelet, while protesting she meant to return it, would not that have told him of a sudden bitter need for money?

URGENT WORK WAITS

Rich people, she thought knew nothing of such crises in the lives of the poor. But had they not the imagination to picture it?

Seward's idea of a painful financial difficulty, she thought scornfully, would be to find himself faced with a dinner check, and discover he had left his money in his morning clothes!

Urgent work was waiting for Cathleen at the office and it was not until the lunch hour that she was able to record in a letter that must explain the return of his hateful gift. She still owned him the three hundred dollars with which he had redeemed the bracelet. Grimly she resolved to send the money as had already owed and assure him that he should receive the balance as soon as possible.

When Alspaugh again drew money from Ingram's private account for his own use, he felt none of the qualms that had troubled him before. How could he lose if he followed the Chief's own lead? This time he helped himself to ten thousand dollars and bought heavily on margin, the stock in a struggling power company which he knew was to be included, mainly for geographical reasons, in the enormous utility group Ingram was determined to complete.

There was the ever-present though slight, danger that Ingram might inquire into the state of this private account before Homer replaced the money he had taken.

The first indications, however, of a check to Ingram's plans set Homer's nerves a-twitter. Application to the banks for a new loan was not meeting with a ready response.

It was preposterous that difficulties should be made about the comparatively small sum—a mere five million—which Ingram now needed. But difficulties were made and the capital did not seem to be forthcoming.

There was another hasty trip to Chicago, there were days when Ingram was in town but did not come to the office. There was talk of recourse to Washington, of an application to the R. F. C.

$50,000,000 NEEDED

Cathleen was aware of all this, though her knowledge of the ramifications of the business was so slight that she felt no anxiety. Once, in the middle of an interrupted letter, she heard Ingram say to Alspaugh, "Of course, this five million is only a stop-bite. That's why it makes me mad as hell to be delayed like this. Why, we'll need fifty million! Oh, we'll get it all right," he added, with a flash of irritation as he caught sight of Homer's tragic face.

Homer was not primarily concerned because of the check to his chief's plans. When he sat, with dropped jaw and vacant eye, drawing circles and crosses on his blotter, he was occupied mainly with his own troubles. He went home from the office these days to sit opposite Marian through a dinner of which neither ate much and which generally passed in almost unbroken silence.

Thinking of her lover's having their last meeting or scheming for the next one, Marian would utter a spasmodic remark or two when the maid was in the room.

"I don't know what we're coming to. It's terrible. You can't get money. When J. H. can't raise money, you can see what a pass we've come to. It's all under cover, there's no confidence. J. H. has plenty of confidence, but he doesn't get the cooperation he should. Why, he's having the devil's own time borrowing a measly five million."

Yes, and Homer speaking of mink, Marian interrupted, "you got me have some money today, didn't you? I simply must do some shopping tomorrow. I haven't been out of town since before my—I mean I don't there are dodgers of—"

GIVES HER $100

She was surprised at the readiness with which he gave her the fifty dollar bills. It was not like him, she thought to make a fuss about a hundred dollars when he was already so deeply involved. If he owed nearly a million he could do no harm to Ingram's account and the stocks he had bought were going down.

Sometimes he was irritable, exhausted by the day's events, and would over protest. He wasn't to forget, Jean Marian's made his bed. Let's she only would. If she'd only with him on the sofa, put her hand somewhere around his neck and give a little kiss to him—ever him as a wife should he might forget the day and wake up to find more, the with a cool head and newed courage.

He did not know that Marian's gladsomeness was part of a cool and deliberately adopted plan. She intended to shame Homer into going outside for what he could not get at home. She had slept in the private dormitory whose doors had closed Dolly H. Brook her door from her first husband. It was in shelling Hugh Ingram the results so far had been disappointing.

Apparently Angela would not waste but to the Ingrams. I have not seen Dolly in Palm Beach, she assured Marian, but I am told she is supposed to be coming back to Newport for the winter. The dowager is wonderful to Homer.

You see, I must be kind to the poor little boy. The puzzle has its points for Mrs. Alspaugh after a week or two of her. Homer, he'll be a—

You're very unwise, I think, to be kind to Homer. I don't see why you should keep right on after him as I—

Marian never realized how wise her husband was in advising her to stick to trying to find Seward's demanded more and more money.

SALVATION IN NECKLACE

That evening with the success of his potion known to her, Marian never kept Seward's wife's neck. It was the first time she thought he had his suit on.

That night as soon as he was in went into the bathroom to look at long-drawn out evening, took the possessed himself of the pearls, examined them closely in the electric light. He counted them, and found to his great relief that the number was correct. He had not lost the pearls and found which the tiny ones near the clasp swelled to the large ones that dropped lowest in front. As usual, he could be fond their exact order in his mind. When Marian, flushed, cold creamed, and pretty in her lace pajamas, came back, Homer was already in bed with his eyes shut.

The next day Alspaugh made a hasty journey. Shop after shop, he went some dozens of stores, all in vain. Then he remembered a man he had once met in some different connection, that he recalled was a Marian's because confused, and a ruled by calling shops of down necklaces on approval. That night we was all again, but he was a the tall and bald man difficulty in separating from among the imitation pearls a string that was distinguishable from the pangs of conscience.

On his way home with apprehension that Marian should have noticed the substitution. That he had behaved badly towards her, did not bother him. She would have had to give up the necklace anyway if he were ruined, and if, on the other hand he should reap the profits he hoped for, he could easily repurchase her pearls and change them back again—always provided that she had deserved such consideration by her behavior to him in the meantime.

It was obvious that Marian was in a bad way at the end of each week. The Boston Evening American offers the third in a series of "About Faces" cartoons featuring leading women whose names appear at your downtown theaters.

Nineteen at a Time—Just One Big Soviet Leap

MAKING HISTORY—One of the greatest mass parachute jumps ever attempted took place over the Tushino Airport "Aviation Day," in which tens of thousands of citizens of the Soviet Union witnessed the air progress made by the U. S. S. R. in the past year. In the above photograph nineteen parachutes are shown billowing out over their nineteen jumpers. In circle the jumpers are shown, looking like flies, immediately after they had jumped, simultaneously, from the huge bombing plane which carried them aloft. Man Who Trapped Dillinger Held

Chicago, Sept. 6 (U.S.)—Arthur McGinnis, who says pal John Dillinger on the spot, was captured here by police who fired several shots at him as he attempted to flee in his automobile. McGinnis' pockets contained about $800, which was seized as invest gators could trace it in time to determine if it was taken in a bank robbery.

McGinnis is to be arranged for Dillinger today in the office of a doctor here. He expected to have ripped plans to the address. When Dillinger is arraigned by Mayo Lyons of Indianapolis, left the office, they escaped by backing their car to an intersecting street.

Horse Track Larceny 'And the Danger of 'Drying the Public Cow

The Case of J. D. Mikel As One Among Many Still Undetected

By AUSTEN LAKE

IT DOES SEEM THAT OUR HORSE TRACK STATES are showing too much Christian tolerance toward sinners who plot to defraud the public of its spare, or betting, money. Rhode Island has just let John D. Mikel go free after finding one of his horses had been jabbed with wild juices on August 24.

Austen Lake

It is logic that the reason for squirting chemicals into the veins of a race horse is to make the animal go faster or slower than his normal gait to deceive people who innocently invested their dollars at the plug's par

This, to my simple way, constitutes fraud, which should be punishable by bagging the offender in the state vaults.

Of course, these habits are not considered depravity among horsemen, any more than it was thought mischievous among the stock-ticker and investment brokers to cut themselves slices of cake from the public funds during boom times . . . until the government took some of the boys as samples and stowed them under federal glass.

Only a small percentage of the stock cheaters were ever stored away—just as now, only a minute number of the horsemen who needle their steeds or scrub their tongues with heroine are caught.

And when they are, as in the case of J. D. Mikel, it is put down merely as poor home training rather than innate badness, and in time they are let come back to jab and scrub some more.

WELL, YOU DON'T EXPECT PROFESSIONAL horsemen to yawn down opportunities to collect as much in a few months as whole industrial communities earn in a year.

It is interesting to note that Narragansett gleaned more than $700,000 in its recent meeting—virtually all profit. Because the entrance fees, sale of programs and concessions, and the split of the odd pennies cover the overhead and track purses. So next month when Narragansett resumes it probably will pay off its $1,300,000 layout.

And Rockingham has already more than wiped out its original investment.

So what?

So the percentages awarded the tracks are too high and the supervision of their activities is too lax.

I would suggest that, if the tracks were as careful in policing their stables and sprinkling dicks and stool-pigeons among the swipes, as they are in keeping unlicensed, frowsy types away from the gates, they would halt some of the practices that amount now to open larceny.

And, instead of waggling reproving fingers at convicted cheaters, if they would snap a state halter over their chops and lead them off to clink, the cheaters would either retire or turn honest.

As it is, the Rhode Island commission waited more than a week after detecting the Mikel fraud before making their finding public. Meanwhile a number of horses of that stable won and lost races on the track.

In saying this I am conscious of hollering with my head on a sack. Because history shows that when sportsmen are out to make themselves some money, they have very little self control. They are not content to milk it out in little jets. No sir! They will amputate the udders, to the run of the cow, and make the profits pour out all at once

Well, the public, being in mental tone something of a big good natured gilly, and not always scrupulous on its own side, gets sore slowly and a little at a time. This is due to the fact that the public is so big and unwieldy that not enough of it gets hurt at one time to concern the rest, until it is their turn.

But after the experience at Narragansett and Rockingham in the last year, during which some $30,000,000 of depression dollars changed hands, it will not be long before the people suddenly stop showering down and the big, lavish horse plants go back to weeds and a clutter of rubbish

MORALITY, WHICH IS SUPPOSED TO BE a matter of conscience, is more often a question of geography and getting caught. Possession of bookmaker's coupons was, not so long ago, prima facie evidence of lawlessness in Rhode Island and New Hampshire, as it is now in Massachusetts

And in Florida, my friends, which is one of the few remaining outposts in our social frontier, you can step openly into a cathedral of chance and stake a fortune on the uppermost spots of the dice or the whirl of the little white moth ball.

I know of pillars in our own Boston society who have broken local covenants in Florida, but I doubt that they experienced any spiritual alteration or feeling of guilt

I recall the day, some years ago, when Judge Fuchs discovered a trusted employe tampering with his gate receipts. And although the man had pilfered a large sum—upwards of $50,000—the judge said to waiting newsmen, "Now he was good to you boys. Don't write anything that will injure him. We just took a pistol out of his pocket."

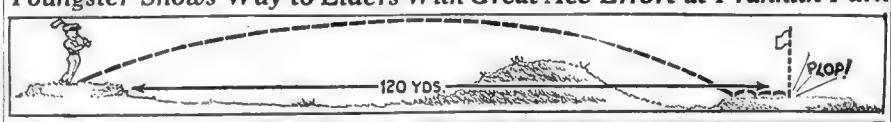
And, in returning to my office, I relayed the Judge's expression of charity to my city editor, a hard-boiled, disillusioned character of the old school.

"Tripe," said he. "Sit down and write the news. This bird never thought of blowing out his brains in the years while he was stealing."

So I doubt that many of the alley characters among the horsemen who are still practicing their track frauds feel a proper stab of conscience. Like country boys, found stealing watermelons, conscience comes with a charge of rock salt fired into the slack of their breeches.

It is some fun, I can tell you, getting indignant about these things, and I don't know which annoyances I like best, the horse track thievery or the exploiting of featherweight girls and boys in the marathon dance, like the current one at Brockton.

Youngster Shows Way to Elders With Great Ace Effort at Franklin Park



JOHN RAFTERY — WM. P. LONG — JOE HOWE — SOLLY KOZOL

WELTER ACES IN 15-ROUND RETURN GO FOR TITLE

By Max Kase

They—and the indefinite "they" takes in those of a carping and critical nature among the better minds of the boxing racket have been asking pertinent questions

They are asking whether the one time Ruby Face has reached the end of his long, long trail; whether time has robbed him of his punch whether he has reached the peak and is slowly passing over the crest

Jimmy makes his answer tonight in the Flats of Long Island City where the Garden Bowl has been planted, before an expected audience of 50,000. He meets Barney Ross, the only fighter to hold three titles at one and the same time in the history of the prize ring, in a return 15-round bout with the welterweight title at stake.

McLARNIN CONFIDENT

Jimmy lost his welterweight crown he had won from Young Corbett to Ross on a 15-round decision in May. The betting today is 7 to 5 that McLarnin will fall in his quest and that Ross will go on to an even greater triumph.

The Ross followers point to Barney's youth, his great left hand, his boxing skill and savvy, to his flaming ring ambitions, the fire of which has not been banked even with the winning of three championships

The McLarnin camp insists Jimmy was ring rusty in his last fight with Ross

They point to the fact that only one fighter has ever been able to beat McLarnin in a return match That was Bud Taylor. McLarnin, grim faced and serious, was confident he would turn the tables on the Chicago flash

"I never wanted to win a fight so badly," he said as he planned for the weighing in, after coming in from his Orangeburg camp. "I am sure I will win. I maintain I did not lose to Ross last spring.

"The loss of the championship was a blow to me. It upset my plans. But I know I will be much better tonight. I have had no weight worry. I feel strong and I know I am doing a better job of boxing than I did at any time in Atlantic City last spring.

"At my present weight I am hitting with better effect. I won't make any predictions but I'll give this fight everything that's in me"

McLarnin is expected to come in weighing between 146 and 147 pounds. Ross after a final three rounds of exercise at Stillman's Gym, weighed at 138½ and probably will come in at that level.

Ross, cool and calm as the fight hour approaches, said he would win even easier on this occasion.

KASE PICKS McLARNIN

"Jimmy has improved and will be heavier," he said of the fight, this morning. "But don't forget I have come along too. I think I'll be able to do much better myself. I am now going to take any unnecessary chances. I'm hitting better, and I don't fear the outcome one single bit."

Your agent, always a great believer in the punch, again leans to McLarnin. He believes, as does Sammy Fuller, who is one of a Boston expedition to the battle, that the last fight with Ross has helped o sharpen McLarnin up for this encounter, that his punching will be improved, that the weight will be of a decided advantage.

Your agent, shooting the works, looks for McLarnin to win by a knockout. So there.

BARTELL MIXES WITH ADAMS

By Universal Service

Philadelphia, Sept. 6—In a dramatic duel, heightened by Camilli's homer for the only run of the game and a pitched battle between Dick Bartell and "Sparky" Adams, rival infielders, the Phillies pulled out a great victory over the Cubs, Red Lucas pitching, today in the opening game of a double header.

Hansen and Si Johnson, opposing pitchers, were in great form, Camilli's driver over the fence in the second being the only break in the run of scoreless innings.

Bartell and Adams tangled in the fifth when the former was called out on an attempted steal, high words between the pair being climaxed when Adams aimed a punch at the local captain, who replied in kind.

After separating the belligerents the umpires decided to permit them to remain in the game

By Walter Kiley

It was opening day of the Boston Evening American's third annual Hole-in-One Contest at Franklin Park.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield and Park Commissioner William P. Long had promised to fire the opening shots. They were scheduled to appear on the "ace" tee at 1 o'clock.

1:01, lo! and behold, hardly had the Hole-in-One editor arrived on the scene at 8:30 when along came the mayor And what a greeting he received as he stepped up, posed for his picture and, with deliberate swing, bombarded the green 120 yards away with five really fine shots, albeit they were slightly out of the charmed circle.

There was a delegation of more than 50 Franklin Park caddies laying in wait for just this opportunity to greet the mayor.

Up they marched, half a hundred strong, and with the mayor at their mercy proceeded to expound the theory of free golfing caddy tournaments every Monday morning And they further proposed that a silver cup trophy be donated for the winner of the big caddy championship

RAFTERY LEADS

Nailed right down and with no escape possible, Hizzoner conceded to the extent of agreeing to advise with Commissioner Long and gave his promise to do everything possible to fulfill the youngsters' wishes

So it looks as though right off the bat the Boston American's tourney has been the means of accomplishing a real good for these capable little whirlers

Opening day was a grand and glorious success. More than 200 men and women golfers competed, and a surprising number sent balls smack into the charmed circle which is 20 feet in diameter.

Even James Michael Curley, former mayor, showed up and took his turn with the rest. And James Michael had no cause to blush for shame. For he plunked two of his five shots onto the green, just a foot away from the outer rim of the cup.

John Raftery, a 16 year old youth whose home is at 3 Oakdale Park, Jamaica Plain, achieved top honors for the opening day's contest with a beautiful shot that settled within the charmed circle, a mere 2 feet 4¾ inches from the cup.

Roger Doherty, a caddie whose home is at 25 Rosemare street, Jamaica Plain, was right behind him with a drive that came within 2 feet 6¾ inches from the winning mark. Nineteen others followed these two leaders with mere inches separating their respective places.

Mr. Boston Says:—

Hole-in-One Tourney
Luck Decides Winner
Browning Confident

By Jack Conway

DID YOU ever make a hole in one?

If not, I would suggest you drop out to Franklin Park any afternoon and try your luck in the Boston Evening American's Hole - In - One contest.

I use the word luck because I believe chance plays an important part in making a hole in one.

There is, of course, a certain amount of skill required to have the little white pellet land on the green. But when it comes to getting a hole in one it is necessary to give luck a chance.

A year ago tonight, man stepped from behind a counter at a sporting store, picked up a mashie and, on the agate and ended with a hole in one! [illegible]

I saw the famous Jesse Guill of Texas take four strokes to get on the green and not a single ball traveled on the green.

I have had [illegible] coming out of traps with a putter, [illegible] when off the green with a No. 6 iron but I have yet to [illegible] the distance to get a hole in one.

Element of Chance

IN FACT I am [illegible] if the green even at the [illegible] hole. I played it [illegible] Country Club [illegible] Memorial. The second time [illegible] from the [illegible] and I stepped in front of [illegible] group of [illegible] shot [illegible].

If you are on the right way to have a tick at [illegible] hole, the green. I usually shoot to the right, and [illegible] my approach is not too bad.

My caddie [illegible] finding my ball [illegible] green that he didn't watch [illegible] the other one. After a long search it was discovered I had dropped my ball near the pin and it had remained there. If I had scored a hole in one I would have given full credit to luck.

Moral: If you are able to swing a golf club, drop out to Franklin Park and compete in the Boston Evening American's tourney. You may win one of the valuable prizes and get the thrill of your young life. And holes in one who is under 100 by playing there in one.

And may we stop to drink a toast to Park Commissioner William Long, who had the special hole for the Boston Evening American's tourney constructed several years ago, and who has always taken great personal interest in this golfing test.

Browning's Title Chance

JIM BROWNING'S youth and tremendous strength will give him a chance to beat Ed Don George in their world heavyweight wrestling title bout at the Crescent-Pinhurst Post show at Fenway Park next Wednesday night.

Browning is at the peak of his career as a wrestler. He has a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of the game and the necessary ability to give George a stiff ring battle.

Browning probably will use much faster pace than did Jim London in his contest with George last July. London is a mat veteran and was obliged to conserve his strength in the early stages of the combat. Jim wanted to make sure he would have something in reserve in the event of a long contest.

The bout lasted over three hours, which proved London used excellent judgment.

Browning will not have to be cautious as he is only 32 years of age. He is eager to batter his way to the wrestling heights and about the quickest way to do this would be by pinning George.

MAT TITLE GO TO POSITIVE FINISH

By Jack Conway

Ed Don George and Jim Br[illegible] ing will wrest [illegible] the winner if it is necessary to do so when the [illegible] heavyweight [illegible] ling bout at Fenway Pa[illegible] Wednesday night.

[illegible] tion of the Crosscup P[illegible]

"George and Browning will battle until one of them has won. Matchmaker Alex MacLean announced today. "Neither wants a draw decision. So they will wrestle all night if necessary.

"George and Browning are each young, and can stand a hard, fast pace. Browning was the one who insisted that the tussle must go to a positive decision.

"He has been chasing the champion for months, and now that he has got him cornered he wants to make certain he is permitted to battle until a winner is declared.

Freddy Moran, [illegible] has made it known [illegible] preferred [illegible] London in a [illegible] taking on Browning.

"Ed does his own business, and I suppose he has the right to make his decisions," said Moran, "but Londos would prove an easier opponent than Browning. Jim is getting along in years, and is liable to crack wide open any day.

"Browning, on the other hand, is a big, strong, tough fellow. He is heavier than George, and is well schooled in wrestling. Perhaps I'm talking a bit out of turn, but it was a poor match to take."

The Crosscup-Peterson [illegible] mittee reports a brisk demand for reservations. The committee has passed the $5,000 mark, and proceeds of the show will be used for Post's Christmas Fund.

Jockey's Boy Wonder Enjoys Taste of Fame

With the roster of candidates swollen to over 75 by late additions, the Boston College coaching staff can at least be proud of the plenty of material to work with this fall.

Two complete [illegible] have reported, well experienced and familiar with each other. The one which is the finest is the so-called "Junior" backfield formed of Paul Flaherty of Wakefield quarter, Tom Brennan at half, a blocking back, Pat Avery at full and Ed Driscoll, the speed merchant of the backfield. Not a bad carrying position.

McKenney also has a [illegible] and more powerful [illegible] into the fray. This is composed of Joe Curran at full, Bob Curran at half in carrying position, either Fenlon or Moynahan at quarter, and Bill Hustis, a newcomer who has greatly impressed McKenney in the blocking [illegible].

BOARD TO TRY 'WHITE LINE' METHOD

By Bill Grimes

Extensive preparations are underway for the handling of the gallery at The Country Club next week, during the United States amateur championship.

According to the most reliable authorities, the Brookline club will outdraw any of the recent championships—New York, and especially Greater Boston—by more than a million dollars. That's the size of the gallery that is expected to follow the golfing celebrities of the country.

Early this morning, there was a large crowd at Brookline waiting for some of the stars to start their practice rounds. Yesterday a gallery of 500 at first trailed Ouimet after France. Ouimet, Lawson Little, Johnny Goodman, Tony Torrance and H. Chandler Egan.

The Country Club was not prepared to handle the gallery, but Harold W. Pierce, Bob Johnson and Everett Lassiter jumped in and did manage to keep the crowd off the greens.

POLES DANGEROUS

Charles E. Mason, the chairman of the golfing committee which has been meeting at regular intervals for some weeks. For years, it has been quite a task for national amateur and open championship keep the onlookers in check via the hazard pole or rope method.

Neither of these systems has been satisfactory.

Ropes and poles are dangerous in the hands of the general run of marshal, while many people have been spiked, tripped, or tripped over the rope, while hurrying to get a good view of the watch the [illegible].

After careful study of the proposition from all angles, Mason and his committee decided to do so to speak—put the galleries on their honor, by doing away with the pole and rope system of check mating.

Encircling every green at The Country Club is a white line. The committee has decided to have a rope [illegible] to be used by marshals stationed at each green to restrict the galleries to the confines of the restricted areas.

Mason is of the opinion that the galleries will be quick to grasp the idea of the white lines and that the innovation will prove a success.

Naturally, there will be some enthusiasts who thoughtlessly will be guilty of infringing upon the forbidden ground, and the marshals have been instructed to be courteous in their requests for the galleries to respect the white lines.

NO LIST OF "DON'TS"

If the marshals during the [illegible] there will be no "Don't please" echoing across Clyde Park next week. In previous championships many shots have been ruined through the thoughtlessness of marshals yelling for the gallery to [illegible].

The Country Club marshals will be instructed not to talk [illegible] unless necessary and to try to [illegible] the gallery by signaling with the [illegible].

Mason is very much opposed to a list of "Gallery Don'ts." All he wishes is that the players be given an opportunity to play their shots without any outside interference, such as loud talking and running, and that everyone, without the proper authority, keep outside the white lines.

Hand That Rocks Cradle Puts Golf's Pro Stars on Rocks Says Gene Sarazen

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 6—Says Gene Sarazen: The hand that rocks the cradle is rocking a lot of golf's best professionals into bankruptcy and mediocrity.

Possibly Gene thought he would be safe from subsequent feminine wrath, when he made plans to hop a boat for Australia for an exhibition tour, but he cancelled the trip on [illegible] must take his medicine.

"The saddest thing in golf [illegible] a muffled two foot putt that loses a big championship," said Gene, a married man himself. "The [illegible] jealous and gossiping wives of our playing professionals who haunt their husbands and watch them fire every shot in a money tournament or championship.

"It's time the shackled pros arose in a body and told them to stay home, watch their pro shops or sew buttons on the old man's shirts.

CURSE OF GOLF

Those women are the curse of golf today. Take the average one of them, who pursues her husband a good golfer with a good chance to get somewhere in an important championship. What happens?

Every time he goes to make a shot—a shot that may win or lose the title or a thousand dollars—he sees his wife staring at him with those words in her eyes: 'If you miss that [illegible] and let Mrs. Hooke's husband beat you, why—'

"The poor guy may have a fighting heart like Jack Dempsey, but who can blame him for getting the shakes? He misses the shot and gets a dirty look. Thinks his wife: 'I can see that smart Mrs. Block giving me the high hat right now.' No, sir!

"Women like that are so strong psychologically that they beat their husbands and turn golf tournaments into 'hen' sessions. Oh, I know. Many a time I've heard a wife give one of my victims a piece of her mind."

OWN WIFE IDEAL

Sarazen and Mrs. Sarazen [illegible] ideal professional's wife [illegible] never follows him, and seldom [illegible] about golf when he comes [illegible]. With that, he paid tribute to [illegible] wife of Paul Runyan, most successful of the money playing pros [illegible] winter.

"She's one woman who minds her own business," Gene said. "After he had won a certain championship, Runyan telephoned his wife.

"'Honey, I just won,' he said.

"'Fine,' she shot back, 'when you come home, bring two loaves of bread. We've got company for dinner.'"

Francis Ouimet on Edge for National Amateur

By Bill Grimes

Before night falls, practically all of the qualifiers for the national amateur championship will have checked in at The Country Club. Although there has been much activity at Clyde Park since the course was opened for practice, less than one-half of the contenders for George T. Dunlap's title were on hand up to today.

With four more days of practice before the opening of the championship, The Country Club appears to be in for a terrible licking. Already, the beautiful fairways and the tees for the short holes—fortunately, they are playing from the front areas—are pock-marked.

"Are you going to take the wires down at the short holes before the championship?" inquired Lawson Little, the British amateur champion, of H. W. Pierce. "I am like hell," was the reply of the chairman of the golf committee.

Incidentally, the same H. W. Pierce has been pulling for rain for the past three days. Despite the fact that it is arid and moist, The championship course needs about four inches of rain.

One of the freakiest shots seen at The Country Club was "Spec" Goldman's iron to the first green yesterday morning. He was in the rough off the tee, and his long iron hit the slight bank at the far edge of the track, bounced some 20 feet in the air, and came to rest about 15 feet to the left of the pin.

C. Ross Somerville, the ex-titleholder, and runner up to Scotty Campbell in the recent Canadian open amateur championship, was one of the early arrivals at Brookline this morning. Somerville came in from London, Ont. and is taking his first look-see at the Clyde Park lay out.

Jesse P. Guilford, Eddie Kirouac and Eddie Bowers are the only locallers who have not played a practice round. They are expected this afternoon.

Although he has carded a sub par and a "three over" round, Francis Ouimet is not really bearing down at The Country Club. Rather he is simply getting into the right physical condition for the championship. Francis' game has never been better. If his stamina does not fail him, he is going to be bad news for the boys next week.

There is an abundance of real champions working out at The Country Club, and the more one looks around the more difficult it becomes to select a probable winner. In fact it would be a task to pick two of the players who will stay in the running to the semi-finals.

P. A. Torrance, who captained the British Walker Cup team and the lone Briton to enter the national, is handicapped by a bad leg. Tony has been receiving treatment for a variose but is of the opinion that his injury is due to colliding with a chair on shipboard. As he has not played golf for a month, he felt that he had had enough yesterday after playing nine holes.

Charlie Yates, the pride of Atlanta, Ga., appears to be content to round into form slowly. He worked out for a while yesterday morning by playing the Clyde nine and in the afternoon went the route with "Scotty" Campbell, Leland Hamman and Gus Rainwater.

Other than one might admire their courage, it cannot be said that Reynolds Smith and "Specs" Goldman used good judgement in playing Lawson Little and Johnny Goodman for a ball a hole. The Texans separated themselves for 10 balls.

Little and Goodman were all for playing the Lone Star State boys for a buck a hole, but Goldman stated he had more golf balls than dollars, so they battled for agates.

COGAY IS CHOICE IN OPENER OF CARD

order to reach the winner's circle in the five and one-half furlongs of the third race here tomorrow afternoon.

The gelded son of Donnaconna was beaten only a half-length in that last race, and was wearing the winner down with every stride. With nothing as formidable as Douglas F. in this affair, Dornoch needs only a smooth ride in order to earn brackets.

COGAY, VACILLATE, HASTY PETER

FIRST RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and upward, six furlongs:

Cogay	110	Secular	102
Wise Review	108	Laurets Nash	109
Hasty Peter	112	Tenny R	109
Mist Paragon	112	Happy Surprise	112
Finnic	107	Vacillate	109

COGAY was beaten only two lengths in his last race by Douglasf. Dornoch and Allotment. That effort was his first over this course and it should serve him in good stead. Prior to that race, the son of Carlaris ran several smashing races at the recent Narragansett meeting. VACILLATE'S last race was too poor to be true. The Volta mare is capable of beter things. On Gansett form, she would stand a royal chance. HASTY PETER has always been fond of this strip and may share in the spoils.

MISS VINCE, BON MOT, VALISE

SECOND RACE—$800, claiming, maiden two-year-olds, six furlongs:

Ina O	110	Sandship	110
Deserted	108	Weeddit	108
Valise	108	E. Clare	109
Goose Creek	108	Also eligible—
Sweet Tea	105	Dom Zot	111
Miss Vince	109	Miss Belne	100
Play Back	108	Cemor	105
Farbucket	112	Fair Countess	113
Winged Flight	116	Am O'Riley	113

MISS VINCE has two excellent Hawthorne races to recommend her for honors. Last out ehe was favored over a fair lot of juveniles and finished third. Prior to that effort she led home Tabitha and other speedy ones, only to be disqualified. BON MOT, one that is conditioned by Earl (Handy) Sande, placed in his last two efforts at Saratoga and figure to offer the contention. VALISE just failed to earn brackets in her last outing at Gansett.

DORNOCH, CASH SURRENDER, CABOUSE

THIRD RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, five and one-half furlongs:

Decorate	110	Cash Surrender	110
Cabouse	110	St. Omer	113
Chain	113	Dornoch	110
Duckkeeper	110

DORNOCH has drawn an outside post position and should avoid all early trouble. CASH SURRENDER has up every now and then with a smashing race. On best form he should prove difficult to handle. CABOUSE is coming down and is entitled to some consideration.

CLOUD SWEEPER, SAND CLOUD, MORNING MAIL

FOURTH RACE—$1200, The Cheshire Claiming Purse, two-year-olds, six furlongs:

Cloud Sweeper	106	Westys Duke	105
Morning Mail	106	Race Craft	111
Annie D. M.	110	Sand Cloud	112
New Fine	102	Sched	105

CLOUD SWEEPER comes here with an excellent New York record. Last out the daughter of High Cloud defeated General Farley and others with ease. SAND CLOUD drubbed some fairly good ones on opening day and shapes up as the main danger. MORNING MAIL would be all dangerous on best form.

LOFTY LADY, BELOW COST, COLD SPELL

FIFTH RACE—$1000, three-year-olds and upward, claiming, one and one-eighth miles:

Below Cost	112	Cold Spell	110
Mecahlat	112	Brass Monkey	106
Lofty Lady	108

LOFTY LADY needs only intelligent handling in order to hold this field safe. The daughter of Pilate Au Feau has only to run back to her recent Pawtucket victory in order to be returned the victor. BELOW COST was the victim of a poorly judged ride yesterday. Jockey Helm evidently thought the race was a half mile instead of a mile and one-sixteenth. With better rating, he should have the place from COLD SPILL.

Vested Power, Boocap, Polly Cee

SIXTH RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one mile and one-sixteenth:

Jeniess	108	Instigator	108
Vested Power	112	Polly C.	105
Boocap	109	Guidepost	105

VESTED POWER is dropping down a long way in class among these $1500 top and bottom platers. Last out the W. H. Gallagher colors bearer ran a fairly good race to finish fourth in $2000 company. BOOCAP placed to Tuffy G. last out and is entitled to the next best rating. POLLY CEE was a fairly consistent performer over at the other town and should share in the spoils.

SHASTA STAR, MEROVECH, FLYING DON

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one mile:

Mint De Mie	102	Woodorse	112
Faintine	107	Shasta Star	108
Chimney Top	104	Heigh Rose	103
Flying Don	111	Dont Blush	108
Wedding Ring	107	Burleich	101
On Big	112	Merovech	111

SHASTA STAR has been away from the races since the last meeting at this track, but the clockers report her razor sharp. Just a question of her fitness. MEROVECH ran a nice race at this same distance last out. FLYING DON is the speed of the party and will be dangerous.

PERRY FINDS COMPETITION WEAK TO DATE

By Associated Press

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 6—Fred Perry appears to be poised for another year as men's singles tennis champion of America.

Although the British holder of the title has not yet had an opportunity or occasion to unsheath the lightning of his strokes, he is easily the cream of the 32 survivors in the third round of the current 53d national tournament.

Perry cut down his first two opponents without letting himself out, although in each match he gave the gallery a glimpse of his strength as he permitted his opponents to run up leads and then stepped up his pace to a burning speed that almost knocked his rivals from the court.

Perry lives and loves tennis. Because he hasn't been able to get even satisfactory workouts in the tournament, he leaves the stadium court after his matches and plays with a friend on an outside court.

PLAYS AFTER MATCH

"I've got to keep my game sharp," he explained today, "that's why I like to continue playing right after a match is finished."

The sparkling Briton, who retained the Davis Cup for Great Britain by his fourth match marathon victory over Frank X. Shields at Wimbledon in July, knows that the American entrants are out for his scalp and therefore declines to make any forecast about his chances of repeating.

"I'm out to win, naturally," he said, "but I won't say that I'm going to retain the championship. I'll guarantee only one thing—I'll fight until I drop."

To Perry, all of his American challengers look alike, and he has no special fear of Roderich Menzel, the towering Czechoslovakian who is making his first appearance in the American championship.

"Some of the Americans—George Lott, Frankie Parker, Wilmer Allison and Berkeley Bell, for example—have been enjoying good years," he said. "That's very nice and I'm glad to hear it. They're nice fellows. "But it's not what they've done that counts, it's what they do here. I'm ready for any of 'em."

PLAYS TALBOT TODAY

While Perry drew another breather in Jack Talbot of Buckhill Falls, Pa., several of the American stars found themselves deeply involved in tight matches.

The stellar contest of the third round brought together Gregory S. Mangin, twice former national indoor title-holder, and the giant Menzel, with the outcome considered a toss-up.

Other third rounders included Frank Shields vs. Jack Tidball, John Van Ryn vs. F. D. H. Wilde of England, Sidney B. Wood, Jr., vs. Frank Bowden and Berkeley Bell vs. Vernon Kirby or South Africa.

Three-Day Open Starts at Blue Hill Today

By Bill Grimes

With President Ben Morse, Charlie Reynolds, Eddie McAuliffe and John Ford as the welcoming committee, the Blue Hill Country Club annual three-day open medal play handicap tournament started this morning.

As it is, one of the three courses in this section with a watering system, the Blue Hill course is as green and velvety as though it was the beginning, instead of the fag-end of the season.

For months, Blue Hill has been preparing for its annual open tournament, by watering its course daily from 7 o'clock in the morning until 9 p. m., averaging 250,000 gallons per day.

The tees, fairways and greens are fit for the staging of a national championship. Naturally, the course plays long, at least two strokes over its par.

The same conditions existed a year ago, when out of a field of 197 contestants, Fred Hannon, Wollaston, and B. E. Robbins, of the home club, were the only players to break 80, and they are but one stroke under that figure.

BIG BOYS ENTERED

Due to the fact that the traffic at The Country Club will be slow from now until the start of the amateur championship, some of the contenders for national honors plan to participate in the Blue Hill open, after learning of the remarkable condition of the Canton lay out.

By so doing, they will get in some competitive golf before the Brookline classic.

As usual, the Blue Hill Country Club is offering a fine array of prizes. The field is divided into three classes, with gross and net prizes for each division.

In Class C, Blue Hill is offering the latest design electric serv-a-lite for low gross and another pair of golf shoes and a Waterman onyx pen and pencil set for the best net scores.

PRETTY COURSE

There will be two special prizes for Blue Hill members, a cigarette case and light for the low gross and an electric razor blade sharpener for the first net.

Golfers have been learning so many favorable reports concerning the condition of the Canton course, that—weather permitting—the three day Blue Hill open should attract a field of close to 200, all of whom, regardless of their article of golf, will be completely sold on the picturesque lay out.

RHODES TWIRLS FOR RED SOX

Cleveland, O., Sept. 6 — Dusty Rhodes was the Red Sox pitching selection today in the second game of the series with the Cleveland Indians. Mel Harder, Indians ace right hander, was scheduled to oppose him.

The series opened much the same as all Cleveland-Boston series have been opening this season, i. e., with a Cleveland victory.

On the mound for the Red Sox was Lefty Grove, once a fine southpaw, now just a chucker. Grove was blasted out of the box by the Indians in the fourth inning.

BANGUP RIDER THOUGHT DYING WEEK AGO

By Dave Egan

Rockingham Park, N. H., Sept. 6—Man's brotherhood to man was never better exemplified than that shown by Willie Curran, one of the leading jockeys of the land, when he sat his scare little frame in the press coop here and dictated the following story:

"Jockey Charlie Allen, who was unseated from Lampert in the early hours of a foggy morning at Narragansett Park race track, was around today minus his crutches, Charley says he hopes to ride in a week, in which time he believes his ailing foot will be completely healed.

"Charlie is well known throughout the country and has established himself as one of the country's best riders. He has won his share of the country's big stakes, and also has had his share of bad falls.

"Well, here's hoping he is back in the saddle in a week, riding for his contract employer, O. L. Foster, whom he has been with for many a year."

I claim this is something good, for there is reason among jockeys. But Willie Curran is too good a jockey to be jealous of any other jock.

FRACTURED SKULL

There is a fraternity among jockeys, as there is among newspapermen. You can ask Eddie Hurley, Arthur Siegel, Whitey Wilson and Jack Conway among the newspapermen.

And among the jockeys, you can take Willie Curran, Louis Schaeffer, Georgie Ellis, Sonny Mattioli, "Smoky" Saunders, and many of the other old riders.

Charlie Allen is one of the most popular jockeys in the trade. He has more lives than a cat, which has several lives. Jack Conway, Narragansett, he took a toss, and the reporters announced he was dying of a broken pelvis and a fractured skull.

Master W. Curran wishes to report to the class that Jockey G. E. Allen is married and has several loose teeth, plus a few missing ones, which (says Jockey W. Curran) will be replaced.

BORN MATCHMAKERS

Up here are Eddie Mack, who made the matches for the Argonne A. A. in Boston, Charlie Turner, who trained Jim Maloney, and Emergency Kelley, who could fight a little jick himself.

The Sergeant Mack finds it more difficult to match horses than he did fighters. But between him and Mickey Brooks, who has charge of the press box, they manage to pick a winner here and there.

Daring Yank Sailors Won Race in '93

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6—A masterminding helmsman backed up by a courageous crew in a lumpy, running sea lent a dramatic touch to the America's Cup races of 1893 between Lord Dunraven's British challenger, Valkyrie, and the defending Vigilant, owned by a New York syndicate.

The series was run on a three-out-of-five basis and Vigilant had won the first two races by margins of more than five minutes and ten minutes respectively.

The third race was sailed on Friday, October 13. The sky was overcast, a heavy easterly wind swept the course and the sea was in a fit of misbehavior.

Valkyrie got the jump at the start, sailing headlong into the teeth of the blow for the 15-mile windward leg. The defender followed across the starting line by nine seconds and wasn't able to make up the time. With the advantage of the weather berth, Valkyrie was two minutes ahead when she rounded the mark boat and headed for home.

Nat Herreshoff, who designed and built the defender in his now famous Bristol, R. I., shipyard, was sailing the Vigilant and, after quickly gaining a vote of confidence from his crew, resorted to daring tactics to save the race.

As the yacht sped and bounded along down the wind, Nat Herreshoff climbed the mast and, working on their lofty perches with the assistance of the crew, had all of his crew below set in a pyramid of rounded and hardened canvas. In a few seconds—in 35 minutes. It was risky business, for should the sail not meet they would go thundering down over the bow. They didn't, though.

Valkyrie, on the other hand, was afoul off route. The crew had straightened the spinnaker while setting it. The squall did the rest, and the sail was soon in tatters.

COL. ROOSEVELT ASKS DEFEAT OF BRANN

Portland, Me., Sept. 6—Headed by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, a army of Republican spellbinders appealed to citizens of Maine to reject the "New Deal" by voting for Republican candidates in next Monday's general election.

Speaking to 2000 people in Bangor, Colonel Roosevelt pleaded particularly for defeat of Governor Louis J. Brann, Democrat, asking his re-election would be interpreted by the country as an endorsement of Roosevelt policies.

Brann, campaigning on other issues, has denied that his election would have any connection with national politics.

BRANN AT HOULTON

Meanwhile, the Democratic campaigners, adhering to their policy of conducting their campaign in the aid of outside speakers, are speaking in widely separated parts of the state.

Governor Brann reached Houlton in northern Maine on his speaking tour which has taken him to every county of the state. There he reiterated his claim for gubernatorial election absolving himself of any nationalistic ambitions and called attention to the record of his administration.

He referred to the great and numerous prominent citizens of Maine who have answered Hoover's call to help their state's commonsense business men and not regard it to party affiliations.

DUBORD SEES VICTORY

In South Berwick, P. Dubord, Democratic candidate for U. S. senator, forecasts a heavy Victory, saying "the acquirement of the people rather than allegiance to any political machine will turn the tide."

Dubord related that he had received messages from hundreds of Republicans pledging their support in his campaign against this veteran Republican senator, Senator Frederick Hale.

Sleuths Raid Inn on 'Baby Face' Tip

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 6 (NS)—Armed with a search warrant, gas bombs and revolvers, eight federal agents raided the McKinley Inn here on the "tip" that George "Baby Face" Nelson, pal of John Dillinger, had been seen there. They found no trace of the gangster, but arrested Earl W. Leeds, plasterer contractor, accusing him of maliciously giving false information.

Sophie Tucker Is Hurt Ending Row

Miss Tucker was signing autographs at the stage door to the Empire Theater, in Shepherdsbush, when the fight began. She handed an album to a woman who had asked for the autograph, but to another snatched it from her hand.

Sophie pushed her bulk between the two and caught a wild one on the eye, which rapidly became discolored.

X-9 PUP MADE CLUB MEMBER

When some member of the Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 Club finds that he or she has been lucky enough to win the cute Eskimo puppy now at Norumbega Park, he also will discover that with the winning goes the first canine member of the club.

The puppy, it was revealed today by the Big Chief, will be regularly enrolled as a member of the Secret Agent X-9 Club, and therefore will become probably the first Eskimo "bloodhound" on the records.

The time in which to put in your names is growing short, therefore, if you wish to enter the contest and try to win this puppy, you had better hurry.

Send in your three selections of names best suited for the pet. Perhaps you will be the lucky winner.

Send your name to Secret Agent Puppy, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

Port of Boston News---Waterfront Notes

By WILLIAM F. MAGUIRE

Happy job, this climbing aboard around the world cruise ships, but when you unexpectedly meet two ferocious animals it is far different.

In another cage were two canary's, just pets, taken on at Singapore. But the pet of them all was Minnie the Moocher, from Siam, so nick-named by one of the crew. Said he:

"Minnie has an odd appetite. Every hour she bellows for food."

Newark Bears Win International Flag

New York, Sept. 6 (NNS)—Leaders in the International circuit race since the beginning of the season, the Newark Bears today were proudly waving the 1934 pennant following their win over the Syracuse Chiefs, 4 to 1, yesterday.

A full five games ahead of the others, the Bears growled the Chiefs into submission in the ninth when Roy Schalk hit a homer with two on and two out, to break a 1-1 tie. The honor of pitching Newark into the pennant went to Ken Makosky, rookie right-hander and only New Jersey resident of the team.

Sarnoff Opens New Store

Boston, where Irving Sarnoff first started a little hat shop 25 years ago, saw the opening today of the big Sarnoff chain's newest store, featuring a men's clothing department in addition to hat, shoe and men's furnishings departments.

Doors of the new store, located at 343 Washington street, were opened ceremoniously this morning. President Sarnoff was present, as was Harry Gould Sarnoff, manager of the Sarnoff-Irving chain.

A throng of friends and old customers of the firm were on hand with congratulations.

Since the Sarnoff-Irving stores had their beginning in Boston and New York, they handled men's hats only. As the business expanded to other cities, shoe and men's furnishings departments were added.

The new chain for the first time offers a complete line of men's clothing, including suits, overcoats, topcoats and tuxedos.

ARTHRITIS

Mr. John Reilly, 28 Warren Ave, Somerville, Mass., says:—"I was bedridden from a sudden and fast attack of arthritis since then. I had been treated in the relief hospital and the treatment did not help me. A former employee told me that Dr. Walsh had helped his wife. I had Dr Walsh treat me. I was soon entirely well and have sent many patients to Dr. Walsh in the year since he treated me and brought others personally. I make this statement in the hope that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for relief."

Visionary Leadership Recalls Pied Piper

THAT was a happy comparison which Mr. Hearst made in his interview in the New York Times on Sunday of the unbalanced reformers of the hour, whose remedies are pure fiction, with the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

The Pied Pipers whom the unsettled times have brought to the surface of affairs—for a brief while only, we hope—are figures hardly less strange, viewed from every sound and sensible standpoint, than the Piper of Hamelin, whose "queer long coat, from heel to head, was half of yellow and half of red."

Like this obvious prototype, the Tugwells and the Upton Sinclairs dangle at the end of their "scarf of red and yellow stripe" a penny whistle on which they seek to sound the cracked and reedy music of Communism and Socialism—only they call their tunes "planned economy" and "regimentation."

We wonder, however, how long penny whistles and piping will satisfy our people as substitutes for sane leadership.

"If Americans," as Mr. Hearst says, "have not lost their common sense and balance of judgment entirely they will stop following sweet singers and smooth talkers some day and settle down calmly and reason out a few things for themselves."

They should remember that the end of the Piper was a tragedy—for him and all the infatuated children who followed him with "little hands clapping and little tongues chattering, like fowls in the farm-yard when barley is scattering."

It will be recalled that when they reached the mountain-side "a wondrous portal opened wide" and swallowed them all up. Pied Piper, pipe and "queer long coat of yellow and red."

An Old, Old Story

Above are pictured the ancient dueling pistols Russ Columbo was examining when the one at the top exploded and killed him.

The death of Russ Columbo, singer, added another to the seemingly endless chapters of fatalities, all concluding with "he didn't know it was loaded."

It is probably almost useless to point out to possessors of firearms the need for caution in handling them. They know it, but many do not keep their knowledge in mind at moments when it is most needed.

To handle firearms at all times as if they were loaded, even if you THINK they are not, would seem to be the part of superior wisdom.

This is something very easily done. It would have saved the popular Russ Columbo's life, and this suggestion, if followed, will be sure to save many others.

Harvard and New Deal

The New Deal has made such tremendous changes in the business landscape of the nation that the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration plans to devote special attention to it this fall.

Four special courses are to be offered by the school. Professor Sumner H. Slichter is to teach a new course in industrial relations, devoted to the changes brought on by collective bargaining.

Dr. Elton Mayo and Lloyd Warner will treat of the administrative problems brought on by the New Deal, and Dr. Philip Cabot will devote his lectures to the impact of government on business and vice versa.

That there is real need for courses such as these is indicated by the fact that Harvard expects more than one gray-haired business executive to leave his desk and come to the lecture halls on this side of the Charles. As Dr. Cabot said:

"The chaos which now prevails is a new phenomenon for the nation. The World War and the Depression are not adequate to explain the things that confront us. The root causes are, I think, changes in the races composing the nation and in the environment in which we live."

Boon to North End

The Trustees of the George White Fund have turned the Prado over to the City.

This is an expanse of 24,000 square feet of land in the North End at Hanover and Unity streets and Webster avenue. It has been cleared of unsightly buildings and landscaped at a cost of $267,000.

Today it presents a beautiful vista with its geometric lines of trees—78 of them in the shadow of the Old North Church—and its central fountain, 30 feet in diameter.

North End residents will appreciate this beauty. They will appreciate even more the opportunity the Prado will afford for a breath of fresh air of a hot summer's night or as a place where children can play in the open without fear of being run down by an automobile.

All Boston should once more be grateful for the White fund. It is hard to conceive of a finer memorial that a man can leave than an endowment that constantly adds beauty and comfort to his city.

Buffalo Bill Outmoded

The flying ace has taken the place of the Wild West hero in the affections of the American boy.

So says Colonel Roscoe Turner, one of the best of our sky pilots, and we agree with him. And, moreover, welcome the change.

Aviation brings out the same sort of virtues that life on the open range used to—strength, courage, skill, daring, loyalty and vigorous self-reliance.

The Shepherd of the Flock

He cares for them because they keep him in luxury.

They are of use to nobody but themselves and their keepers, the parasite politicians.

Let us clear Massachusetts of those unnecessary tax districts and useless offices. Drop superfluous counties.

Think of it—there are no fewer than 14 counties in this state, though a far smaller number would be sufficient for all necessary purposes.

Human Side of the News; One Useful Wonder

By Edwin C. Hill

Of the seven wonders of the world—incidentally all of the Old World—only one is useful, the marble lighthouse, known as the Pharos of Alexandria.

All the others, with the exception of the hanging gardens of Babylon were symbolic of mortal man trying to project himself into immortality—such immortality as may be encysted for a few centuries in marble and granite.

We, too, have our temples and obelisks, and we, too, look out into the void, but we do not sink the lives of countless men and laggard centuries into a pyramid to make some vain king a "balance brought forward" in a later and heedless day.

THREE GREAT DAMS

The three great western dams —the Boulder dam, the Fort Peck dam in Montana and the Grand Coulee dam represent 14 years' employment for 13,000 men. That would have been a small unit of time and man-power on the great pyramid of Cheops.

It would be interesting if some engineer would translate the human dynamics of the 70 pyramids into horse-power, dynamite, compressed air drills, steam shovels and kilowatts and let us know how many men and how much money and time it would take to build them now.

But the important thing is not the how, but rather the why of these hard-rock adventurers of the age of faith and the age of reason.

"What do we want of more farm land and power when we're plowing under crops and shooting live stock because too much of everything has wrecked the world?"

Thus the average burgher reading in his newspaper of President Roosevelt's visit to the Grand Coulee dam site. Without venturing into an economic thesis, one may report the outlines of this latter day paradox.

Regardless of the desperate expediency forced on the administration by price economics, in its crop limitation program of last year, it faces the fact that that long pull out of an obsolescent agriculture makes it imperative to get the largest possible production per unit.

Any farmer, getting 40 bushels of wheat per acre off 80 acres of irrigated land, protected against drouth, is better off and has a better chance to rear his family decently, than he would be farming a flistered half-section in the dry-farming area, with the hazard of drouth, and an average yield of eight or ten bushels.

LOOKING BACKWARD

This, in an individual business, is, of course, a matter of simple accounting. Applying any simple business precept to large-scale social economics, one runs afoul of all sorts of human variants and human uncertainties, and perhaps that is just why history assigns the most human of presidents to what seems perilously like the task of re-allocating man, energies and land in a great new pattern of work and destiny.

Looking backward over all the great migrations of human kind toward arable land, the life force which impels them over mountains and deserts, one sees something deeper than brain trust economics making the President crash through paradoxical barriers and drive toward abundance.

These three great western dams together would make a water area as large as one of the great lakes. With scientific crop rotation—throwing a switch for the moment on the law of supply and demand—they will provide abundances for millions. They will provide 2,000,000 horsepower of energy, and that means the equivalent of the work of 16,000 men.

Seeking an answer to the obvious question as to piling up a greater surplus in a break-down caused by surplus, this writer finds the spirited President and his advisors aware of far-reaching implications of their conservation and agricultural program.

Fewer farmers will produce more than the 27,000,000 farmers now produce, and have a better time doing it. But what is to become of the farmers displaced? What is to become of the men displaced by the 16,000,000 men springing from those three great new turbines?

The only possible answer is that man, as a seemly guest in the house of life, must accept the earth and the fullness thereof, or else bow himself out. That is how humanity has survived in the past, and that seems to be what President Roosevelt is up to.

WHAT IS MEANING?

Does it mean great shifts of population. Does it mean taking multitudes of miners from the obsolescent coal industry, educating them as farmers, and placing them on productive land? Does it mean a shift from profit economics to subsistence economics?

Does it mean, in the phrase of the New Dealer, a transition from the economics of scarcity to the economics of abundance? Is it in any way reconcilable with, or separate from, the great world equations of commerce and exchange?

All this sounds a bit highflown and far-fetched to a busted Kansas farmer, and there are those who will dismiss the whole business by saying it means simply more relief for Democrats. But, regardless of all policies of crop limitation, the Reclamation Bureau shoves ahead, and, furthermore, it seems to be backed by intangible forces.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

Almost every modern wife is disappointed in her husband. She doesn't always show it, or get maddened about it. But she's disappointed, just the same. And it's always for the same reason.

It isn't for anything he's done, or hasn't done. No complaint in the average of legal divorce grounds covers his shortcomings. Yet, in the eyes of his wife, his offense is greater than if he had beaten her, been unfaithful to her, neglected to provide or openly deserted her.

Elsie Robinson

For he isn't what she thought he was going to be.

He isn't what she thought any man would be.

She has, it is true, associated with males ever since she was born, to an extent unprecedented in human history—played with them, gone to school with them, worked with them, done business with them—observed them in every department of their lives.

SECRET PICTURE

Yet in her mind she has always carried a certain secret picture of what a husband should be —and that picture is utterly unrelated to male reality.

Oddly enough, it is almost exactly the picture which her mother carried in her mind. Thirty years have passed since her mother entered marriage with that picture. Today, her daughter would not dream of wearing her mother's clothes, following her mother's program or accepting her mother's notions of life.

To the contrary, she thinks that mother, as a bride, must have been a Sentimental Sap, and prides herself on her superior sophistication. Yet, when it comes to husbands, the only difference between her ideal and Mama's is that Mama's wore whiskers.

For women are incurably romantic. You may give them suffrage, co-education, careers and a single standard, and they will act up like an entirely new and different sex. But all the time their secret attitude toward love will be identical with that of Bessie Bearclaw's, the Caveman's Cutie.

So, despite her unhampered association with The Boys, the bride of 1934 expects just such a hero as her mother expected —a brave, reckless, resourceful, gallant gent upon whom a weak woman can lean in any and all emergencies.

A charming picture, and one which got by beautifully in the 19th century. For, in that man's world, males were the whole show, because they ran the works.

They owned all the jobs, had all the say, controlled all the kale. As a consequence they moved in a glamour of reflected power which the individual man might be a million miles from meriting.

IN A MAN'S WORLD

Grandpa himself was frequently the most stupid and spineless of worms. But Grandma had no way of guessing it. She never really saw Grandpa as himself—as was.

She saw Grandpa in the setting of a man's world—glorified by the traditional courage and resourcefulness of all the male sex. And, given an average break, Grandpa was always able to live up to her expectations.

But the picture has changed. Granddaughter—by her own insistent demand for Equality—has smashed that dream world into smithereens. And today husbands must get by on their own merits —if at all. And is mama surprised!

For, of course, poor papa no longer fits that romantic picture of the 80's and 90's. As a matter of fact, he never did fit it. Men were always just Human Beings —as timid and stupid, silly and helpless as the other half of the race. They were never as reckless and romantic, as resourceful and strong as ladies thought they were.

But their economic and industrial monopoly allowed them to look the part. And since grandma didn't know any more about the real world than a newly hatched humming bird, she couldn't call their bluff.

Why have we such an appalling divorce record today? That's why. Don't you believe these charges of cruelty and incompatibility.

The real reason mama is divorcing papa is because she thought he was a hero and he isn't. So what? Your guess is as good as mine.

Some Undesirables -:- By Winifred Black

Well, for goodness sake, the man wants to stay at home! He really wants to. He says so, and he means it.

Winifred Black

There must be something wrong with that man. I don't know what it is, but there's something. I hope it isn't something too terrible for words, but I just can't keep from wondering about it.

We've had so many men at this little place, for so many months. Just a garden, and grates to clean, and a few windows to be washed, and one or two errands to run. So we thought that we might be able to get a man to come and look after things for us for his room and three good meals a day and some money.

Not much money, to be sure, but the best we could do in these times. And we started looking for the man.

Oh, they were easy enough to find—the single men out of work. You stumbled over them everywhere you went.

We picked out a good, sizeable man, with something sort of pleasant about him, and he was tickled to death to come and "try the place" as he said.

He was all right for two or three days—and then he began to sleep late in the morning. He'd get up and have a cup of coffee, and maybe some ham and eggs at 10 o'clock, and then he'd go back to bed and sleep for hours.

Then we got a young fellow with a pale face and sort of hungry eyes. He did his work all right, but there was something sort of restless and furtive about him. And finally one day two policemen came and took him away. He was "wanted" for something, somewhere.

Then we got a middle-aged man who had seen better days. He was pretty slow, and he could spill more ashes on the rug in the living room than any human being I ever saw. But we wouldn't have minded that.

One day he stopped a guest on the front porch and told him he thought his coat needed pressing, and he could recommend exactly the man to press it for him. Also, didn't he want his car sort of rubbed up a little? And wasn't there something wrong with the engine? He thought he heard it coughing a little.

Always interested in our guests, and suggesting things his friends could do to make them look more respectable and "up-to-date" as he called it. Sort of a friendly soul, I suppose, but we weren't sorry when he went.

But we've had this new man now for three days, and you ought to see the garden! He has pulled weeds and swept paths and polished door knobs, and yesterday he asked for the vacuum, all by himself. Why, he seems to like to work! He goes around humming or whistling to himself, and we just can't make him out at all.

What do you suppose makes him that way? We're going to have a guessing contest and give prizes to the neighbor that guesses the right answer.

Now all this is the story my elderly neighbor told me this morning.

She has a comfortable house, and rather a comfortable small income. She isn't able to do garden work or to take up ashes herself, and she had almost made up her mind she and her invalid sister would have to go to an old ladies' home somewhere, to get any kind of comfort.

I wonder who's going to win the prize at that guessing contest?

By Edgar A. Guest

MEN AND WOMEN AND HATS

When Nellie goes to buy a hat
She looks at this and looks at that;
She walks a mile or two each day
To gaze at bonnets on display,
And very wistfully she stops
Before the windows of the shops,
Intent on finding if she can
A model of so rare a plan
That when she ventures on the street
Its own twin sister she won't meet.

When Nellie wants to buy a hat
It must not be too high, too flat,
Too wide, too narrow or too gay,
Too simple or too much to pay,
But more important far than price
Or style or fit or looking nice,
The bonnet that she buys must be Unique in realms of millin'ry
"Because," she says, "no woman cares
For hats her next door neighbor wears."

But I am not disturbed like that,
When I am told I need a hat
I merely drop into a shop
And pick one from the newest crop.
"Seven and five-eighths," I tell the clerk.
He hands one down, and with a jerk
I slap it on, and out I go,
Crowned for another year or so,
Content to meet in rain or shine
A million other hats like mine.

Stars and Stripes

Advance of season may be seen from Massachusetts Democrats being called on to put in Coie.

We seem to be divided into two classes—those who want work and those who won't work.

A survey shows that when the drouth hit our corn-fed hog, it was the drouth, not the corn-fed hog, that "oink-oinked" for help.

"The Socialist party is dead," says Upton Sinclair, who went Democratic just in time to escape being one of the deceased.

England is willing to let Columbia be gem of the ocean as long as we let Britain rule the permanent waves.

Deport Criminals!

By DANIEL W. McCORMACK

U. S. Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization

In a radio address over the network of Columbia Broadcasting Co.

IMMIGRATION as such is no longer a major problem.

With the adoption of the quota principle, immigration was reduced to approximately a quarter of what it had been up to that time. In 1931 immigration was still further sharply reduced by strictly enforcing the "likely to become a public charge" clause in the immigration act.

As the result of this policy, immigration was cut down to in the neighborhood of 30,000 a year.

For the last three years, emigration has substantially exceeded immigration, nearly three aliens having returned to their native lands during these years for every one immigrant who has come to the United States.

This does not mean that our immigration laws are perfect. This is far from being the fact.

They should eventually be changed to provide for a better method of selecting desirable immigrants.

It is important that they IMMEDIATELY be changed to make it possible to rid the country of alien criminals who now escape deportation through taking advantage of the technicalities in the existing laws.

Today it is possible for a man with as many as twenty-five convictions, as long as they do not carry sentences of a year or more, to escape deportation.

Men who have been charged with murder, homicide, counterfeiting, debauching the morals of minors and, in fact, ALMOST THE WHOLE CATEGORY OF SERIOUS CRIMES, still escape the deportation net.

REMEDIAL legislation was proposed in the last Congress which would have enabled the Immigration and Naturalization Service to deport such persons, but, although approved by the House and Senate Committees, it failed of passage in the closing days of the last session.

It will be reintroduced in the new Congress and better results are hoped for.

On the other hand, while the present law permits criminals to escape, it is unduly harsh with respect to decent folk who have, either by an illegal entry or by some technical violation of the law, subjected themselves to the penalty of deportation.

No discretion is given the officials of the Government in such cases.

While we have proposed to Congress that laws be enacted which will enable us to deport the criminal aliens now able to evade deportation through the imperfections in the present law, we have also proposed to the Congress that a measure of discretion be accorded in the deportation of persons of good character who have not been convicted of any crime and whose deportation would result in cruel and unnecessary hardship to their innocent families.

In order that there should be no impairment of our policy of restrictive immigration, it has been provided in the case of any quota alien permitted to remain in the country that a deduction shall be made from the quota of his nationality.

Thus we will guard against any increase in immigration as a result of the just and humane policy.
